

Convicts surrender after 105-hour courthouse siege

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two armed convicts, driven back by gunfire and tear gas in a desperate attempt to escape their besieged cellblock, surrendered to law officers Monday night, ending a 105-hour ordeal at the U.S. District Courthouse.

Hours after their frantic effort to find freedom by axing their way into a courthouse ventilation duct, Frank Gorham Jr., 26, and Robert N. Jones, 24, were flown to the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

Gorham and Jones had been inside the cellblock since Thursday when they seized eight hostages and tried to bargain for a freedom flight to Africa.

They released one of the hostages Friday and held the others as bargaining pawns until the seven fled Sunday in a daring escape engineered by one, a deputy U.S. marshal.

Stripped and handcuffed, Gorham and Jones gave up 36 hours later.

The final act of the drama began about 9 p.m. EDT Monday when they used an ax to hack their way into the air duct. For the first time since Gorham and Jones had barricaded themselves inside the basement lockup, officers exchanged gunfire with the pair, then used tear gas to force them back into their confinement.

No one was hurt.

Deputy district of Columbia Police Chief Maurice Cullinane, part of a force of about 20 District policemen and U.S. marshals who stormed into the cellblock area, said he persuaded Jones and Gorham to surrender.

"I was just talking to them through the door," he said. "Just rapping with them."

Cullinane said Jones and Gorham stripped and handcuffed themselves.

Then police entered the room, searched them and allowed them to dress again.

They were driven to nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md., where they were ushered aboard a Coast Guard jet parked 500 yards from where President Nixon boards the Spirit of '76.

Norman A. Carlson, director of the Bureau of Prisons, said it was his decision to send the men to the prison in Atlanta. He said the men had nothing to do with it, although authorities had talked earlier of sending them to a prison hospital facility at Springfield, Mo. The men objected to this.

Carlson said Atlanta was chosen because it was the federal maximum security prison closest to Washington. The men had asked for a prison on either the East or the West Coast.

"I'm from this coast and Rob's from the other coast," Gorham had said earlier in a telephone interview with a radio station. "So, I figure if I'm near my people or if we're near his people, we're both going to get checked out."

During the time they held the six men and a woman as hostages, Gorham and Jones demanded to be flown to freedom in Algeria.

Police and marshals with guns drawn patrolled the streets around the courthouse, just a few blocks from the U.S. Capitol, Monday night. For a time after the escape attempt, a police helicopter circled the building, playing a high-powered light onto the roof and grounds.

Gorham, a convicted bank robber and one-time Vietnam paratrooper, and Jones, a veteran of a previous jail revolt two years ago, were reported in good condition by a police physician.

Gorham had faced up to 73 years in prison and Jones at least 30 years.

Pressure on IRS detailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee made public today the evidence its impeachment staff compiled on White House efforts to get the Internal Revenue Service to punish the enemies and help the friends of the Nixon administration.

Most of the material in the 440-page volume already had been made public by the Senate Watergate committee during its hearings last summer and in its subsequent reports.

The Judiciary Committee, which is scheduled to begin debate next week on whether there are grounds for the impeachment of President Nixon, began releasing last week the evidence it has received in closed sessions.

Eight volumes of evidence on the Watergate break-in and cover-up, including one from White House lawyer James D. St. Clair, were made public by the committee Friday. St. Clair submitted no material on the IRS portion of the inquiry.

Like the Watergate evidence, the material on the IRS was presented with no attempt to draw any conclusions or point up the significance of any particular item.

The IRS volume contained 27 "points of information" with each supported by one or more documents or excerpts from testimony.

They included affidavits from two former IRS directors who told the Judiciary Committee about pressures from White House aides to force the tax agency to obey their instructions.

The volume also included executive testimony before the Senate Watergate committee in which John W. Dean III, former White House counsel, said "the President had asked it (the IRS) be turned off on friends of his."

The evidence also disclosed that John Caulfield, a former Treasury Department and White House aide, regularly obtained confidential IRS information from Vernon D. Acree, the assistant commissioner for inspection for IRS.

An affidavit given the committee by Randolph Thrower, a former IRS director, on May 24, 1974, disclosed that Thrower had asked Acree in 1970 "to investigate the possibility of an unlawful disclosure of confidential tax information" to columnist Jack Anderson.

The investigation involved contributions to the 1968 presidential campaign of Gov. George C. Wallace and allegations that his brother Gerald Wallace had unreported income.

Thrower gave the information to Clark R. Mollenhoff, at the time a special assistant to the President, who assured him it had been requested by the President. Mollenhoff told the committee he had received such assurances from H.R. Haldeman, then White House staff chief.

A few days after Thrower gave the Wallace material to Mollenhoff, who had since left the White House and returned to a job as Washington correspondent for the Des Moines Register, it appeared in an Anderson column.

Thrower said Mollenhoff assured him he hadn't leaked the material.

"I stated, nevertheless, that I was greatly disturbed by it and wanted to know how it possibly could have occurred," Thrower said in his affidavit.

"Mr. Mollenhoff replied that the responsibility was at a higher level. I asked, 'How high?'

"His response was to the effect that it occurred at the highest level or at the very top," Thrower said he interpreted that to mean Haldeman or John D. Ehrlichman.

A second affidavit from Thrower described White House efforts to place Caulfield in key jobs at the IRS.

Thrower said he resisted hiring Caulfield. Thrower said he told Charles Walker, deputy treasury secretary, that "Mr. Caulfield's entry into the service (IRS) would be greatly prejudiced by the fact that many would view the move as a political one which would be greatly resented within an organization which had prided itself for so long on being wholly apolitical."

Subsequently, Thrower said "Dr. Walker advised that he had been asked by the White House to tell me that all of my views had been taken into account but that I was to be directed to proceed as they had been (sic) requested."

Thrower threatened to resign and the White House dropped the matter.

In January 1971, Thrower decided to resign and asked Treasury Secretary David Kennedy "that I first would like to discuss with the President my concern about White House attitudes toward the IRS."

Kennedy told Thrower he had been unable to arrange the appointment because "Haldeman had told him the President did not like such conferences."

One of Thrower's successors as IRS head, Johnnie Walters, told the committee in an affidavit dated May 6, 1974, that on Sept. 11, 1972, Dean asked him to initiate IRS investigations of a long list of individuals identified as contributors to or workers in the presidential campaign of Sen. George McGovern, Nixon's Democratic opponent.

Walters said Dean told him "He had not been asked by the President to have this done and that he did not know whether the President had asked that any of this activity be undertaken."

Walters said he told Dean the project "would be disastrous for the IRS and for the administration and would make the Watergate affair look like a 'Sunday school picnic.'"

Walters said he discussed the request with then Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and they agreed the request should be ignored.

St. Clair said the fact that the IRS did not audit McGovern's contributors shows that the President had not wanted that done.

"If the President decided to do so," St. Clair told newsmen, "He could have found a way."

A second Walters affidavit dated June 10, 1974, described pressure from Ehrlichman to get the IRS to find something on Lawrence F. O'Brien, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

From late 1971 through the summer of 1972, the IRS checked O'Brien's tax returns and financial records but found nothing out of order.

According to Walters, "Ehrlichman indicated disappointment and said to me, 'I'm goddamn tired of your foot dragging tactics.' I was offended and very upset but decided to make no response to that statement.

"Following the telephone conversation, I told Secretary Shultz he could have my job any time he wanted it."

The evidence also included documents and testimony before the Watergate committee that indicated that Caulfield had received confidential IRS information from Acree on the status of investigations of the returns of the Rev. Billy Graham and actor John Wayne.

Cyprus radio said five cabinet ministers were sworn in today as part of a new government. It said the new regime would maintain an independent course and avoided any mention of union with Greece, largely thought to have been the aim of Monday's coup.

The broadcast said Nikos Sampson, named president by rebels proclaiming the overthrow of Archbishop Makarios, promised elections within a year and liberty and religious freedom for Cyprus.

The radio also said the new government would pursue a program of political and economic reforms, including

Makarios alive

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Minister James Callaghan told Parliament today that Archbishop Makarios, ousted as president of Cyprus in a military coup, is alive and has been given permission to enter Britain's sovereign base areas on the island.

There were cheers from both sides of the House of Commons as Callaghan told the lawmakers they would be greatly relieved to learn Makarios was alive.

The foreign minister said Makarios had requested permission to enter Britain's base areas on the island and that permission had been granted.

changes in taxation, communications and education.

The broadcast said the national guard would enforce law and order and restore "tranquility in the Church. This is a purely internal problem among the Greek Cypriots. The national guard is in full control of the situation."

The radio also said Bishop Gennadios of Paphos had been appointed acting archbishop to replace Makarios as head of the Greek-Cypriot Orthodox Church.

The radio, which until early today claimed Makarios was dead, ceased the claim after Makarios reportedly made a live broadcast over a rival radio station.

Cyprus radio monitored in Rhodes named the five ministers as: Constantine Dimitriou, foreign affairs, Kyriakos Antoniadis, communications and public works, Pandelis Dimitriou, interior and defense, Constantine Adamides, justice, and Andreas Karistinos, minister to the president.

Spyridon Papageorgiou was appointed director of press and information. He is the Cyprus correspondent of the conservative Athens daily Estia, which follows an anti-Makarios line.

Another broadcast 6th gragh

No prime minister was named.

Another broadcast said certain grocery stores in Cypriot cities will be opened from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. so citizens can buy essential goods, but no alcoholic beverages.

It said otherwise the total ban on movement of people and vehicles remains in effect.

In London, a British Foreign Office spokesman said information from Cyprus indicated sporadic shooting was still going on.

The spokesman said Britain still recognizes Makarios as president of

Sampson

Cyprus. The statement indicated Britain does not propose to have any dealings with the organizers of the military uprising on Cyprus, and that Britain's influence will be directed toward a restoration of the authority of the Makarios government.

But this policy of support is likely to stop short of any military intervention.

The army rebels on Cyprus reported they were rounding up armed supporters of Makarios, but the archbishop was reported alive and broadcasting an appeal to America and Russia to help the Cypriot people resist the coup.

The armed forces of both Greece and Turkey remained on the alert, and reports from Cyprus said fighting between the rebels and supporters of Makarios was continuing.

In Vienna, Austrian Defense Minister Karl Luetgendorf said a report he received from the Austrian U.N. peace-keeping force on Cyprus said the insurgent forces appeared to be far from firmly holding power.

The minister, who said there was permanent radio and teletype contact with the Austrian contingent on the island, said that according to the report resistance against the coup seemed to gather momentum. He did not elaborate.

The minister also said the commanders of the Austrian and Swedish U.N. contingents were shot at but not hit during an observation flight over Nicosia Monday afternoon.

Luetgendorf said the gunners apparently did not know they were aiming at a U.N. helicopter. A spokesman for the Austrian Defense Ministry said the aircraft was not damaged.

In a statement in English broadcast by a station which said it was transmitting from the Cypriot town of Paphos, Makarios was reported to have said:

"I am still alive. The coup has not succeeded because the people of Cyprus are strongly resisting the usurpers."

The broadcast said Makarios accused the Greek government of instigating the coup because it wants to annex the island.

Strike picture cheered by some settlements

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Movers begin moving again in Pittsburgh and garbage is being collected again in Baltimore. But pickets continued to ground National Airlines today and a state employees strike spread in Ohio.

Some labor disputes were settled Monday but about 600 strikes involving a quarter-million workers continued to hamper private industry and government across the country.

It was the most strikes the nation has had in the post-World War II era, according to the Federal Mediation Service in Washington, D.C.

In Ohio, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees began an expanded strike today adding its 7,000 members to a strike that began two weeks ago.

Union leaders said they expected half of the state's 80,000 workers to honor their picket lines at state universities, government offices and other facilities. The wage dispute began July 6 but until today was confined to only about 2,000 workers at a dozen state prisons and mental hospitals.

"We have gone on record to let this state know that we intend to shut it down," said Ted V. Clemans, a federation official.

The Teamsters, with 2,600 members working for the state government, approved the strike over the weekend. Some of the 21,000 members of the Ohio Services Employees Association are striking without union endorsement.

A joint legislative committee meets later today to consider a 25-cent-per-hour increase for public employees earning less than $12,000 a year — about 69,000 workers. The strikers have demanded a 31-cent hourly boost which would be about 9 per cent for prison guards whose starting salary is now $3.52 an hour.

Also in Ohio, local United Mine

Workers officials said they expected more than 3,000 eastern Ohio strip mine workers to take part in a 24-hour walkout that began at midnight Monday.

"We just want to let the public know that we're not behind our international organization in their endorsement of the federal strip mining bill," said a spokesman.

The legislation pending before Congress sets strict standards for reclamation of strip-mined land.

National Airlines' jets rested in their hangars again today as International Association of Machinists members manned pickets at a dozen airports from Miami to Los Angeles.

About 1,600 machinists, fuel truck drivers, stock clerks and inspectors struck National at midnight Sunday. The airline, which canceled all 155 flights to 45 American cities and London, said the strike was costing it $1 million a day.

William Spurlock, chief negotiator for the union, said: "The real issue now is fringe benefits...The pay increase was not wholly satisfactory, but we do not anticipate problems on that."

Base pay for mechanics is between $6 and $6.60 an hour and union officials said the two sides were near agreement on a hike of between 17 and 20 per cent. Negotiations were held in Naples, Fla.

The nation's No. 1 copper producer, Kennecott Copper Corp., reached a tentative agreement with a coalition of 26 unions representing 30,000 workers. "Kennecott is the industry bellwether and we hope the others come forth with suitable offers as a result," said union spokesman Cass Alvin. "I think there's reason to hope this may turn out to be the shortest copper industry strike in history."

Strikers rebel at inflation

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor's patience with the worst peacetime inflation of the century appears to have broken, resulting in the biggest wave of strikes to hit the country since the post-World War II years.

"Workers want more. They feel they deserve more," Chief Federal Mediator W. J. Usery Jr. sums up the situation.

During nearly three years of wage controls, labor showed remarkable restraint in demands and settlements while inflation nibbled away at paychecks. But with the end of controls April 30, labor's militancy began to rise.

The Nixon administration predicted a rash of strikes and higher settlements but as the walkouts spread, one official said, "This is more than we bargained for."

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service counted 593 strikes last week involving 255,000 workers. This week the number topped 600, highest in any week since the late 1940s.

The new readiness to strike also is reflected in the cost of wage settlements, which federal mediators say are approaching 10 per cent. This compares to average settlements of 6.1 per cent in wages and benefits in the final quarter of 1973 while prices were rising at almost twice that rate.

Administration officials fear that a wage explosion will bring a return to cost-push inflation just as other inflationary pressures begin to subside.

Indeed, there already have been some eye popping settlements, particularly in the construction industry. Plumbers and pipefitters recently won a one-year 18 per cent pay hike while welders in Portland, Ore., won a 38 per cent increase in their hourly rate over three years.

AFL-CIO President George Meany says these developments shouldn't surprise anyone. "You can only push people so far," he said Monday in referring to the double-digit inflation rate that has seen retail prices rise almost 11 per cent in the past year.

Mediator Usery says inflation, has hit workers where it hurts most — in their food and fuel budgets.

"The individual worker is trying to keep ahead of the rising cost of living and is putting pressure on local union leadership to get the wages and benefits that will allow him to keep pace," he said.

While the number of strikes is high, most involve small companies or individual plants. Until the copper workers walked out this week there had been no major industry shutdown this year.

The steel, aluminum and can industries settled without a strike. And last month, for the first time in 30 years, East Coast dock workers came to terms peacefully.

But these settlements, although modest on the surface, are proving to be more expensive than first realized as cost of living clauses add to the cost of the wage package.

Escalator clauses intended to keep pay in line with prices are increasing and just about guarantee continued inflation as pay increases automatically follow price increases.

Contracts covering some five million workers were up for renegotiation this year. While most major industries have settled, some trouble spots lie ahead.

Low corporation taxes helping state industry

Post-Crescent Madison bureau — Many state governments have revised their business tax policies and structures but none of the adjustments approaches the significance of corporation tax adjustments achieved recently by Wisconsin, the Department of Revenue says. The department has published a new study measuring Wisconsin corporation policy against business tax rules in other major manufacturing states. It shows that the machinery and equipment tax exemption for manufacturers authorized by the legislature a year ago has handsomely improved the position of Wisconsin industry.

The tax impact study of manufacturing in the 15 representative industrial states covered hypothetical companies in six major categories: paper products, fabricated metal products, machinery, scientific instruments, food manufacturing and processing and printing and publishing.

Major findings: The highest tax costs for the six representative corporations occur in Illinois, and the lowest costs are found in Alabama for five of the six firms.

The lowest cost for the paper products manufacturer is in Wisconsin and this state ranks no higher than 12th of 15 states studied in tax costs for the other five categories.

The result of several recent Wisconsin legislative acts has been to rank Wisconsin lower than every other state studied in a similar assessment in 1973 of varying state tax policies, except Texas.

Property taxes in Wisconsin range from 51.94 per cent of the 14-state average for the paper products manufacturer to 77 per cent for the food manufacturer and processor.

Wisconsin's income tax ranks somewhat higher for corporations than average, ranging from 109 per cent of the 14-state average for the printer-publisher, to 116 cent of the 14-state average for the paper products manufacturer.

John N. Forde, staff economist for the state revenue agency, said the survey covered the states contiguous to Wisconsin, Ohio, New York and California as the major industrial states of the nation, and seven rapidly industrializing states of the South.

Norita M. Glasheen, 35, 1912 N. Charlotte St., was fined $175 and ordered to attend group dynamics traffic safety school Monday for driving while intoxicated.

She was arrested in the 500 block of W. College Avenue late June 22, and she pleaded guilty before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

A two-year term in the Green Bay Reformatory was ordered Monday for a Kaukauna man, found guilty of battery to a police officer in a jailbreak attempt.

Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer ordered the term for Stanley N. Reed, 18, 112 1/2 Tobacco St.

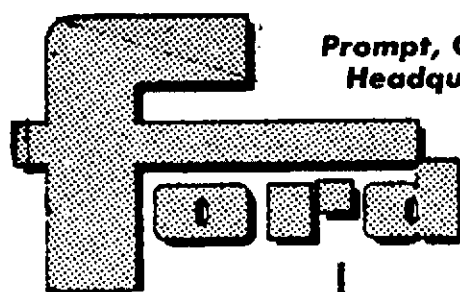

Police said Reed, who had been confined to the county jail during May for theft, perched on a ledge over a cell block door and jumped the jailer, who was making his rounds. A fight ensued in which the two were injured.

The incident took place May 20. In a related court action Monday, Judge R. Thomas Cane modified Reed's original sentence for the theft to a six-month jail term, to run concurrent with the reformatory term. Reed had originally been given 30 days in jail as a condition of one year's probation.

Sugar prices sour profits of confectioners

By JOSH FITZHUGH
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sugar is leaving a bitter taste in some people's mouths this year. For others, it's sweeter than usual.

Since September, sugar prices have tripled, making consumers pay up to $2 for five pounds of the natural sweetener, as well as boosting prices for prepared foods which contain sugar.

And while the individual consumer's over-all bill for sugar may still not exceed $30 annually, the increase is creating serious problems for soft-drink and candy manufacturers who need it in vast quantities.

A year ago the cost of refined sugar was around 10 cents a pound. In March many businessmen considered it high at 20 cents, and now it's jumped to 32 cents a pound, the highest level since World War I.

"If prices would just come down to 20 cents a pound I'd love it," says one businessman who recalls 3-cent-a-pound sugar. "If prices would only stabilize we could handle it," says another industrial consumer.

Life Savers Inc. boosted the price of its candy rolls from 10 to 15 cents this month, blaming a tripling in sugar prices. Other candy makers warn that 20-and 25-cent candy bars are coming if sugar prices remain up.

Poor weather, increasing demand in developing countries and slow production expansion are considered the primary reasons for the tight sugar markets and resulting high prices.

Analysts say commodity speculation and the playing of one market against another by producers have also pushed up prices.

For the past three years world sugar consumption has lagged behind world consumption, forcing refiners and industrial consumers to dig into reserves to meet their needs.

F.O. Licht, the leading sugar statistical firm, estimates that 1974 production of 81 million tons will again lag consumption by some 800,000 tons.

As a result, industry analysts see little likelihood that sugar prices will fall much soon, though they note a volatility caused by speculation.

"Given the outlook for the North American and European beet crop I'm thinking prices may stay high for another 15 months," says John Casstevens, a sugar specialist for Reynolds Securities, a Wall Street brokerage house.

"I think we're going to see a higher and longer price bulge this time," says Bill Cleaver, director of raw sugar operations for Amstar, the country's largest refiner. "There appears to be no substantial increase in production."

A spokesman for CPC International, another major refiner, says capital for new production will only be forthcoming if prices remain high. Besides, he says, "It's very difficult to get people to cut cane these days."

High prices and the profits behind them rankle those businessmen who have to pay the higher bills.

State task force to recommend changes in building code for blind

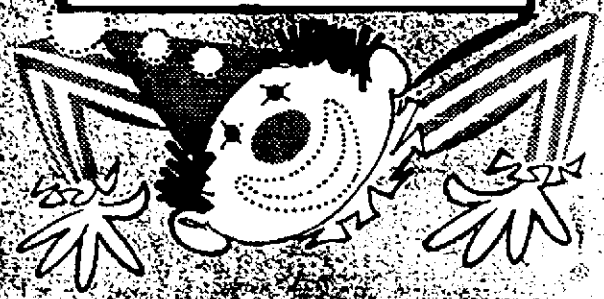

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A state task force on the problems of handicapped persons will recommend some changes in Wisconsin Building Code regulations for public buildings to benefit the blind, its chairman said Sunday.

Rep. James Wahner, D-Milwaukee, said the panel will suggest requiring raised numbers and letters on door signs, raised numbers on elevator buttons and public telephones and special knobs on doors leading to such hazardous areas as boiler rooms and loading docks.

Wahner also told residents of a nursing home for the visually handicapped that the committee will recommend a motorist who commits a traffic violation involving a blind pedestrian be given an extra point on his driving record.

The task force's report is to be presented Friday to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

Tenafly cracks key heist

7:30 - 9 - Channel 5 - "Tuesday Mystery Movie: Tenafly" has a good case, with our true-to-life hero (James McEachin) first hired to watch coats at a party. While there he finds a parking lot attendant (Sal Mineo) attempting to duplicate keys. The case also involves a successful doctor (Joe Campanella), a robbery victim, and an agent (Bob Crane). Indian kachina dolls lead to a solution here. (R)

7:30 - 9 - Channel 5 - "Adam-12" has the usual complement of cases: a traffic accident, a man guilty of a minor traffic violation and a near drowning. Tying it all together are Reed's (Kent McCord) problems with his sunburned feet. (R)

7:30 - 9 - Channel 11 - "Tuesday Movie Of The Week: Linda" will hold your interest. It has a good performance from Ed Nelson as the victim of a fantastic frame-up in which we see his wife Stella Stevens shoot the wife of a friend (John Saxon). Nelson goes for the police but when he returns, nothing is as he said. (R)

9:10 - Channel 5 - "Police Story" has Darren McGavin and Michael Cole trying to find a killer called "The Ripper," whose mutilated victims are all homosexuals. It's a realistic, hard-hitting, but understanding, episode with Peter Mark Richman, Kathie Browne, Leslie Parrish, Sheila Larken and Pat Carroll. (R)

9:10 - Channel 11 - "Marcus Welby, M.D." (Robert Young) is on the fringe of a story in which Dr. Kiley (James Brolin) becomes involved with a young woman who, because of a combination of circumstances, lets her little girl take care of her "littler" boy. A touching tale. (R)

Hope's success aided swindle

BY BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Hope blames himself and Bing Crosby for the millions that were lost by their fellow performers in the Home-Stake oil swindle.

"It's all our fault," remarked the comedian. "We cost this community a lot of money just because of what happened to us several years ago."

"A guy came to us with an oil deal, and it sounded pretty good, so Bing and I put in $105,000 apiece. I remember wondering when I was signing the last check for $19,000 if I was just throwing my money away."

"Sometime after that I was playing a date at Baylor University in Waco, Tex., and this oil guy said he wanted to come down and see me because he might have some good news for me."

He came and told me that others were striking oil around our property.

"Well, that property produced 28 flow-ers that proved to be worth $20 million, and Bing and I were in for a quarter interest apiece. The news made a page in Time magazine, and then every star in town wanted to get into oil."

The lure was irresistible for those making highly taxable incomes. Not only was the original investment tax deductible. Revenue from the wells — if they came in — had the advantage of the oil depletion allowance.

Stars were willing to hand over huge sums without even seeing the wells they were investing in.

As a result, Jack Benny, Andy Williams, Liza Minnelli, Bob Dylan, Buddy Hackett, Barbra Streisand, Alan Alda, David Cassidy, Tony Curtis, Faye Dunaway, Candice Bergen and others got stung in the alleged swindle of the Oklahoma-based Home-Stake Production Co.

"I don't know how I missed out on the deal," said Hope, who was not approached by Home-Stake. "It sounded like a great setup with all those names — like a coast-to-coast wax museum."

It is possible that Home-Stake's masterminds decided not to try the money-wise Hope. The comedian gets solid investigative surveys before he parts with any of his cash.

Dolores Hope was once asked what she thought her husband would have been if he hadn't gone into comedy.

"Why, a businessman, of course," she replied quickly. "And a very successful one."

He has proven that in his dealings, showing an ability to rattle off details of a complicated contract with the same ease that he remembers jokes. He retains oil interests in Louisiana and Mississippi and is considering a deal in Texas.

In recent years he has invested heavily in California real estate and admits that twice a year at property-tax time he cries a lot.

Hope remarked that it's tough for show business figures to find investments nowadays, since the government has been eliminating tax shelters.

The plight of the stellar investors in Home-Stake has provided him with gag

Duke Ellington's band will continue to play

BY CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — "It's the old adage — the show goes on," says Mercer Ellington, son of the late Duke Ellington. "Duke" Ellington.

The famed jazz composer and bandleader died May 24 of cancer at age 75, but the Duke Ellington Band continues to play, with Mercer in the bandleader's role.

"It's not a new experience for the 55-year-old son, who has spent most of his life in and around his father's band."

"There'd be instances when he'd be late for a show, or he might take sick. I'd have to take the band and take charge," said Mercer, who plays saxophone and has also composed some songs.

The 16-piece band has been performing at the Steel Pier here this week, playing the melodies the Duke made famous — "Take the 'A' Train," "Sophisticated Lady," "Satin Doll," "Caravan," "Mood Indigo" and more.

"Our purpose is to see that his music keeps being played, and by good musicians," said the bandleader. "We want to plant in the people's minds that we are playing the songs that Ellington stood for."

Some of the musicians played behind the stylish Duke for decades, including Harry Carney, the tenor saxophonist, and trumpeter Cootie Williams.

But some faces are new, including several musicians and a singer, Anita Moore, whom Ellington found at Texas State University.

Retirement.

ortant a decision to act on quickly.
The proposal is opposed by the Appleton Fire Fighters Union, Local 257, as well as other fire fighters unions across the state who have joined in a resolution backing a mandatory 55 retirement.

Ronald Olm, president of Local 257, said 70 of 103 Appleton fire fighters signed a petition supporting the mandatory 55. Most of those not signing were the older department members, he said.

Bill's policy proposal wouldn't affect other city employees who must retire at 65. But policemen and fire fighters would have to take an annual physical from a physician he selects from a group provided by the city, not including his family doctor, under Bill's proposal.

He also proposed that effective Jan. 1, 1975, the employee's weight must conform with departmental weight tables with minor tolerances depending on job. Those not complying would be recommended for retirement, he said.

Bill said the mandatory 55 argument assumes that all persons becoming 55 no longer are capable physically to perform fire fighter and policeman duties. Medical evidence could counter this, he said.

He also said that careful analysis indicated that continuing employees past 55 wouldn't have an adverse economic effect on the city and its pension program, but rather probably could have a positive effect.

Bill and Selig expressed deep concern about losing experienced men with the mandatory 55 retirement. Bill said that 25 of 29 fire department and 7 of 25 police department command personnel would be lost.

"This loss of trained, experienced leadership would be detrimental to the operations of the departments and might well have an adverse effect on the safety of Appleton citizens," Bill said.

Bill also told the committee that if all employees now were forced out at 55 instead of 65, the cost to the city in additional pension funds would be more than $1 million.

Bill discounted that mandatory 55 would boost morale of younger employees who foresaw the opportunity for quicker promotions. Those approaching 55 could be demoralized, he warned.

Selig spoke strongly for the older fire fighters. He said some men at 52 could move faster than others at 25, and he said the 25 who would be lost with mandatory 55 would be irreplaceable.

one of the men, who is from out of state and whose name has not been released, said the second man, Merrill, had just beaten him and robbed him of his wristwatch and $97.

Another deputy arrived after Goggins radioed for assistance and the officers attempted to arrest Merrill, who, they said, replied with a profane remark, pushed the officers aside, jumped into his car and began driving west on J.

The deputies gave chase and began radioing for further assistance. Merrill led his pursuers to State 45 and then north on U.S. 41 toward Neenah, where roadblocks, which Merrill either broke through or eluded, had been set up by police.

The chase continued into Neenah on Harrison Street, where Merrill turned left on Hunt Street, across Cecil Street and then to Cleveland and Zemlock streets.

He then crossed Winneconne Avenue to Irene Street, where he turned onto Lorraine Street back to Winneconne Avenue. By that time, a Neenah officer had fired three shots, all of which entered the left front fender of Merrill's 1964 car.

On Winneconne Avenue, Merrill began to swerve left in front of a squad car driven by sheriff's deputy Brian Bartelt. Bartelt rammed his squad car into Merrill's vehicle, bringing it to a stop at the corner of Lorraine Avenue.

Officers surrounded his car with drawn guns and ordered him to crawl out of the vehicle on his stomach. He was taken to the Neenah Police Department jail, where he was searched, and then transported to the county jail here.

Deputies said a warrant had been issued for Merrill in Antigo, where he was wanted in connection with an incident in which a woman had been beaten with a tire iron.

It is not known if the man Merrill is accused of robbing will press charges, deputies said.

LU professor joins alcohol education unit

Parker G. Marden, associate professor of sociology at Lawrence University, has been elected to the board of directors of the Midwestern Area Alcohol Education and Training Program.

Marden, who is also on the board's executive committee, is one of three Wisconsin representatives on the board. The program is one of four funded nationally to develop regional initiative in alcohol training and education in a nine-state area.

dren that we attract here. Over 8,700 persons; about one-seventh of the town," Brunken said.

He and Mittlestadt said they believed the original proposal would tend to increase and speed up traffic past the YMCA.

Ald. Robert Safford (7th) voted for the proposal, but only after he was assured by Robert Miller, director of public works, that there wouldn't be serious traffic problems at Morrison and Lawrence.

Under the proposal, there would be stop signs on Morrison going south to Lawrence (traffic would have to go straight through to the parking lot area south of Lawrence) and on Lawrence and Morrison for westbound traffic past the YMCA.

Miller said that if the council adopts the proposal, the city immediately will have to complete a design investigation and forward it to state and federal agencies for the anticipated 70 per cent federal funding for the project.

He said the project would be under a federal urban aid systems program and presumably would be funded in time to allow it to be built next summer. The Wisconsin Department of Transportation administers the federal funds, but there is no state funding involved.

Miller said the department of public works was happy to work with a proposal that would reduce traffic in front of the YMCA. He noted there were similar situations of one-way traffic meeting at intersections, such as at N. Oneida Street and Pacific Street, and Walnut Street at W. College Avenue.

In his sidewalk arguments, Hartwig said he had nothing against Ald. Roy-lance Pointer (14th), who was asking for the installation, but that he knew of other locations in the city where the installation wasn't being forced. He later noted areas along N. Ballard Road and W. Prospect Avenue near Xavier High School.

He criticized the city's sidewalk policy that allows aldermen to request sidewalk — and it must be installed — if certain conditions exist.

Ald. Edward Maloney (9th), a committee member, said he doubted the council would change the policy, but he agreed the city lacks uniform installation. Maybe someone will have to test it in the courts to get it changed, he suggested.

City Atty. David Geenen said today he wasn't concerned about the possible legal challenge. He defended the policy as being reasonable and said the legislative body, the City Council, had the prerogative to institute such a policy.

Hartwig challenged primarily the third point of the four-point policy, the required installation if 50 per cent or more of the city block has sidewalk. He noted areas along the river can avoid sidewalk because much of them wouldn't ever have sidewalk, thus avoiding the 50 per cent figure.

React to emergency the plans which is faulty, but I don't want to say right now what that is."

He added that if the disaster was for real, "I'm sure we would have had a better response."

Selig agreed, saying he would have called in his department's other engine companies. He was concerned that the exercise otherwise would have tied up the department's normal emergency capabilities.

The emergency call was placed by James Joyce, training officer for Emergency Health Services of the state Division of Health.

He called the sheriff's department, notified the person answering the call that the information he was giving was part of a test and said, "A tornado or something hit Edison School. A lot of summer school kids are all mixed up inside. I was checking radioactive supplies in the laboratory and was blown out the window. Gosh, it's awful. Send help."

Joyce said later that the content of this message was not relayed in full by the sheriff's department to the fire department.

The purpose of the exercise was to test the external hospital disaster capabilities of the two Appleton hospitals, seeing how well they could adapt to such a large-scale emergency.

The exercise was requested by the hospitals, which need the test to attain their federal accreditation and state certification, said Rathbun.

The results of the test, which were being monitored by Joyce and other officials, will be reviewed at a meeting in Appleton next Tuesday.

Rotary head to visit

Dr. Lawrence Swanson of Bonduel, governor of this Rotary district, will address Appleton Rotarians Friday. Swanson will meet with the Appleton group, one of 35 in his district, to learn the group's plans for service activities and advice on Rotary administrative matters.

Air conditioners need care

Room air conditioners require care during the cooling season. Mechanical or electrical problems have to be solved by an air conditioning specialist, but there are some basic maintenance details that an owner can handle, reports a filter manufacturing firm.

A strong, steady flow of air is required by an air conditioner to permit it to function properly. Each unit has an air filter that traps dust, dirt, pollen and other airborne contaminants. A clogged filter will reduce air flow and cause the air conditioner to operate inefficiently.

The first step in cleaning the air conditioner is to remove the front panel. A vacuum cleaner attachment or shop vacuum may be used to clean the inside walls, the louvers in the front panel, and the inlet louvers in the rear panel. The inside may also need damp wiping with water and detergent or a liquid cleaner.

The next step is to inspect the filter. If it's the disposable type and is dirty, replace it. If it's made of aluminum, it can be washed and used for many years.

If a new filter is needed, go to a hardware or department store and buy a washable aluminum mesh filter that can be trimmed to the correct size with a scissors. When it's dirty it can be cleaned in warm soapy water, then air dried. After each washing it should be recoated with a filter adhesive that restores original performance. The spray-on adhesive is usually available with filters in stores.

Keep these suggestions in mind during the cooling season: Whenever possible, turn the air conditioning on before your rooms heat up; don't leave windows or doors open; don't let cold air escape, and use shades, awnings and drapes to protect against direct sunlight.

In addition you should keep grills and registers open for proper air movement, observe recommended energy conservation guidelines and check and clean the filter as needed.

Mature men developing confidence in fashion sense

SPRING LAKE, N.J. - The mature man who possibly never buys a suit, shirt or pair of boxer shorts without consulting his wife is gradually developing confidence in his own styling sense, according to Norman Karr, executive director of the Men's Fashion Assn. of America. "Go to any resort and you'll see how he's adapting new looks," Karr said between MFA fall-winter press preview showings here recently. "This is the man who's worked hard over the years. Now with more leisure time, fewer family responsibilities and more money to spend, he's a new customer."

Karr feels mature men like himself still depend on women for wardrobe approval, adding, "you'd be surprised how many men ask their secretaries to shop for them!" Whether accompanying his wife, or striking out on his own, here's what the second forty man is apt to find this season:

Even if you aren't a gentleman farmer or don't own a stable of thoroughbreds, you can look like the country squire. New, tailored suits with a British accent are heavy on tweeds and houndstooth checks.

"My husband would look great in that," a veteran Midwestern fashion editor said approvingly of a model sporting a cinnamon and cream houndstooth wool suit worn with a cream herringbone patterned vest. "But," she sighed, "he'd probably think it was too racy!"

The "country suit" — meant also to be worn in town — is shown in single and double breasted styles and is frequently wrapped and sashed. It's not complete without flap pockets, suede elbow patches and the smell of pipe tobacco.

More leisure time requires the clothes to go with it. "Leisure suits" come in many styles — military, western and jungle bush are most popular. All have a genuine look of comfort. Menswear experts advise that these casual coordinates are meant not for the executive board meeting, but for weekend living, informal dining and everything in-between.

Can a man with a bit of a paunch — wear a leisure suit? "Sure," said Karr, himself stylishly turned out in a kahaki shirt-jacketed suit with print shirt. "He should forget the short Eisenhower jacket suits and stick to the long over-shirt or safari-jacket style." Also, look for suits that are semi- or fully-constructed, instead of the completely natural look.

What can you do with a classic? Go plaid — glen, windowpane or blanket. Add a vest or decorative stitching to the pockets or collar.

There is minimal change in the traditional business suit silhouette. Shoulders appear more natural, although they are often fully shaped. Lapels are more generous. Trousers taper slightly. Some manufacturers are showing European-type models with high armholes and snug-to-the-body fit. "I can't wear the high armhole my son wears," notes Karr. "I've got more development back there — 30 years more!"

Suit prices have risen along with everything else, but this season you may get more for your money. Seek out suits with coordinating vests and an extra pair of pants.

Even if women are no longer invited on male shopping sprees, this season's menswear styles may bring them in on their own. The expert tailoring, luxurious fabrics, wrapped coats that work well with the "big look" in women's clothes, and extra details like shirred pockets and yoked backs did not go unnoticed with the largely female audience.

"It's been quite some time since I've seen women interested in adapting men's fashions for themselves," marvelled the Midwestern editor; "perhaps they think they can get high fashion for less money."

Food labels to carry nutrition information, specialist explains

Protein ... 25, Vitamin C ... 0, Niacin ... 35. This is the kind of information that is presently appearing on many food labels. At the beginning of 1975, it will be required on all food labels.

What do these numbers mean? They tell what per cent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (U.S. RDA) the food supplies in each serving, says Nancy Johnson, nutrition specialist at the University of Wisconsin-Extension.

The per cents are for individual servings to make them easier for consumers to use. Consequently, serving size is also on the label, Johnson adds.

On nutritional labels the following vitamins and minerals must appear — vitamin A, vitamin C, thiamin, niacin, riboflavin, calcium and iron. Also required are the protein, fat, carbohydrate and calorie amounts.

Presently, nutrition labeling for many foods is voluntary, the specialist says. But if a food label makes any nutrition claims, this full nutritional labeling is required. A label can't claim a food is a good source of a nutrient unless it supplies at least 10 per cent of the RDA.

Besides the nutrients listed above, others may appear, she points out. These too tell what per cent of the U.S. RDA they supply per serving.

In the case of fat and carbohydrate, the amount in the food is listed. However, the amount in the food can't be more than 20 per cent above the amount appearing on the label, Johnson explains.

To determine the per cent of the RDA you are eating in a meal or during a day requires only addition, she says. If you ate a food that supplied 50 per cent of your vitamin C needs, you'll need to select another food that supplies about the same amount. Or, you may combine two or more that total the missing 50 per cent.

How did this standard come about? How does someone use these figures to make sure they get the nutrients they need?

The new standard is based on old ones, called Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs), says Johnson. These in turn are based on the best nutrition knowledge available at this time.

The RDAs are what nutritionists have long used, she states. They are estimates of the amounts of certain essential nutrients that healthy people need to stay healthy. They don't describe the amount needed for best health, she adds, for nutrient needs for best health aren't known yet.

Every five years, the Food and Nutrition Board latest reviews the nutrition research and updates RDAs. This board is part of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences. Board members are dietary experts from colleges and industry. Nominations come from professional colleagues and members are selected for their expert knowledge in various areas of foods and nutrition. The per cent from industry is small — one or two out of 10 or 15.

Although RDAs are the best yardstick for nutrients needed, they couldn't be used directly on food labels. It's just not practical, the nutritionist says, since there are several.

RDAs vary for different groups because nutrients needed are determined partly by sex and partly by age. Levels of nutrients are given for each age/sex group.

To have something that would fit on a label and be easy to use, the U.S. RDA was adopted. For each nutrient, one level was chosen, based on RDAs already in use.

Sometimes, the level selected was the highest RDA for any group, Johnson says. For example, the adult woman and teen boy needs more iron than the adult man or a child. So their RDA was chosen as the "U.S. RDA" for iron. If men and children eat enough foods to get 100 per cent of the U.S. RDA for iron, they may be getting a little more than they need.

If the level for one group was a great deal higher than others, a compromise was used. For example, teens and pregnant women need the most calcium of any group, then come adults. So the U.S. RDA chosen is a compromise between teen and adult requirements, the specialist explains. If teens are involved, an extra glass of milk a day would provide the calcium they need, she says.

So how does a homemaker work things out when she plans meals for several ages and sexes? She may need to learn the nutrient content of key foods her family enjoys. (Fresh foods, meats, fruits and vegetables are not labeled.) Then, she can add up percentages from the food labels to make up the differences, the nutritionist says. If one fresh food gives 50 per cent of the vitamin C needed that day, she needs to plan one or more foods that give the same amount.

Otherwise, everyone in the family over four years of age is covered by the U.S. RDAs, Johnson states. If each person eats the foods that give 100 per cent of every nutrient listed on the labels, they're pretty sure to get what they need to stay healthy.

Even if there isn't time to add up nu-

Henley is found guilty

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The jury which found Elmer Wayne Henley guilty of killing six of the 27 young males slain in the Houston mass murders case meets today to consider the sentence. His mother says the conviction will be appealed.

Defense attorney Will Gray said the prosecution and defense had agreed to submit no new evidence and let the jury decide sentence on the basis of five days of testimony last week by state witnesses. Gray rested the defense without calling a single witness.

The prosecution is not seeking the death penalty, but has asked the jurors to send Henley to prison for life.

The jury of six men and six women issued its guilty verdict against the 18-year-old high school dropout just under an hour after getting the case on Monday.

Henley showed no emotion as Court Clerk Mildred Voelkel read each of the six verdicts which declared Henley guilty of murdering Charles C. Cobble, 17; Marty Ray Jones, 18; Frank Anthony Augire, 18; Johnny Delone, 16; William Ray Lawrence, 15; and Homer Garcia, 15.

Henley's mother, Mary Henley, 35, broke into sobs.

Later she told newsmen, "It's what I expected. Do you think it was fair? No it wasn't fair. We'll wait here for the sentencing and then we'll start our appeals."

Gray had already indicated he plans an appeal regardless of the sentence given Henley. Gray filed 59 objections to the charge read to the jury by District Court Judge Preston Dial, and he voiced more than 100 objections during the trial itself.

Betty Shirley, mother of Marty Ray Jones, said she was happy with the verdict.

"I am very relieved. I'm just so thankful it turned out this way," said Mrs. Shirley, who had run screaming and sobbing from the courtroom during the final arguments of Don Lambright, an assistant district attorney.

Lambright recalled a statement which Henley gave police and which was read to the jury in which Henley said Jones was strapped to a board and watched while a friend, Charles Cobble, was tortured and killed.

"What about the boy who lay there and watched the other little boy be raped and tortured. What do you think he thought about when it was his turn?" Lambright asked.

Police said Henley, one of two defendants in the case, had procured young boys — some his friends and neighbors — for Dean A. Corli, 33, who homosexually raped and tortured them.

They said Henley and the second defendant in the case, David Owen Brooks, 19, then helped Corli kill and bury the victims. Brooks is charged with four counts of murder. No trial date has been set.

Henley shot Corli last Aug. 8 during a sex and torture party at Corli's apartment in the Houston suburb of Pasadena. The slaying was ruled self-defense.

In his statement, Henley said he first got $200 for each youth he brought to Corli, but later received only $5 or $10 apiece.

"If you take a friend's life for five or 10 dollars, you've got to get a little more out of it," Lambright said. "The only thing I can think about is that it was fun to watch him lay and scream and squirm."

Henley found guilty

Elmer Wayne Henley, 18, enters Bexar County Courthouse in San Antonio, Tex., Monday, where a jury, minutes later, found the high school dropout guilty in six of the 27 homosexual torture deaths in the Houston area. (AP wirephoto)

Colson claims Nixon had no knowledge of break-in WASHINGTON (AP)—Former White House aide Charles W. Colson says he is convinced President Nixon did not know in advance about the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Colson commented to reporters after testifying for 10 hours Monday before the House Judiciary Committee impeachment inquiry. Members appeared divided over whether Colson was helping or hurting the President with his testimony.

Some interpreted Colson's testimony as indicating Nixon had advance knowledge of the break-in by the White House investigative unit dubbed the plumbers. But others expressed an opposite view.

Colson returns to the committee today for further questioning. His wide-ranging activities when he was a top Nixon political adviser make him a key figure in the committee's impeachment inquiry and the first to face more than a day on the witness stand.

At 10 p.m., with James D. St. Clair, Nixon's impeachment defense lawyer about to start his questioning, the committee recessed until today. The 38 committee members will get their chance at Colson after St. Clair.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., had hoped to wind up the witness phase of the inquiry today, but has not scheduled another day to take care of the final witness, Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's former personal lawyer.

Three committee members quoted Colson as saying he had been told by John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former chief domestic adviser, that Nixon had approved "the Ellsberg operation," which they interpreted to mean the break-in of the doctor's office.

"There was no other Ellsberg operation," said one of the members.

However, Colson, interviewed by newsmen when he left the committee room, said it would be "the darkest of speculation" to draw such a conclusion from his testimony.

He said he had simply repeated the words Ehrlichman had used and did not know what Ehrlichman meant by "operation."

"I was always under the impression the President had approved the Ellsberg investigation, but whether he knew the full details of it, I have no way of knowing because I never discussed it with him," Colson said.

Colson said the best evidence is the White House transcripts and the President's own statements, which indicate he did not know in advance. "I'm convinced, as a matter of fact, that he did not," Colson said.

In other Watergate-related developments:

—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee asked Henry A. Kissinger for any existing records of his phone calls for the panel's investigation of the secretary of state's role in domestic security wiretapping, committee sources said.

—Opening arguments were held in the perjury trial of California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke.

—Samuel Dash, chief counsel of the Senate Watergate committee, said it would have been irresponsible for the committee to have spelled out its conclusions as to who may have violated which laws.

Reinecke trial begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke has been warned by his attorney "that there is going to be some blood flying around" at Reinecke's perjury trial.

"I don't want to see any expressions on you or your family," attorney James

E. Cox told Reinecke as the trial opened Monday. "You've got to take it."

After opening arguments by both sides, the government was to begin presenting its case today that Reinecke lied to a Senate Judiciary Committee in 1972. It was investigating charges that International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. received antitrust favors in exchange for a $400,000 pledge to underwrite the Republican National Convention in San Diego.

A jury of six men and six women was selected after five hours of intensive questioning by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker and challenges by defense and prosecuting attorneys.

As he questioned prospective jurors, Parker emphasized that the Reinecke case has nothing to do with Watergate or the cover-up. When he asked the panel of 70 whether they had heard the names of several former top aides to President Nixon who are involved in the Watergate scandal, only about half indicated they had.

After Parker dismissed 17 potential jurors for cause, the defense excused 10 without having to state the reason and the prosecution excused six on such preemptory grounds.

The jury finally selected is composed of eight blacks and four whites. Biographical data on the jurors was not immediately available.

The jury is sequestered.

TV personality writes own death script

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Television talk show host Chris Chubbuck wrote her own death script and then carried it out by putting a gun to her temple and pulling the trigger as television viewers watched.

The attractive WXLTV-TV anchorwoman, 29, died in a hospital 14 hours later.

Her handwritten, blood-spattered newsprint read, "Today Chris Chubbuck shot herself during a live broadcast."

The story she had scrawled in long-hand was found on the desk where she sat Monday morning and calmly announced to viewers what she said was a television first:

"In keeping with Channel 40's policy of bringing you the latest in blood and guts and in living color you are going to see another first — attempted suicide."

Then she reached into a shopping bag behind her desk, pulled out a .38 caliber revolver, fired a single shot and slumped forward.

"It took less than a second to get the gun to her head and pull the trigger," news director Mike Simmons said.

Spokesmen at the Sarasota sheriff's office and WXLTV said both were swamped with calls following the incident.

They said many of the calls came from viewers who could not believe the shooting had been real and asked if it were some sort of prank.

Last week, Miss Chubbuck jokingly hinted to colleagues that she was contemplating suicide. No one took her seriously.

Coworker Rob Smith said she told him, "Wouldn't it be neat if I were to take the gun, pull it out on the air, live and in living color, and blow myself away."

"I thought at the time it was just a bad joke and changed the subject," Smith said.

Her mother, Mrs. M.D. Chubbuck, said Miss Chubbuck, recently named public affairs director for the ABC affiliate, was "terribly, terribly depressed."

"She said that constantly. She had no close friends. She was already 29 years old and it bothered her. She was very sensitive. She tried. She'd say, 'Hi, how are you, won't you have some coffee?' They'd say, 'No.'"

Mrs. Chubbuck said her daughter, a native of Hudson, Ohio, had been under psychiatric care.

Monday morning she was reading a news report about a shootout at a bar when there was a mechanical difficulty with a film clip.

"She covered for that and didn't seem a bit nervous or upset," said Valerie Rubin, a Sarasota Herald Tribune reporter who saw the telecast.

"Then she picked her right hand up from behind the desk, put a square-looking little gun to her head and squeezed the trigger. The hair on the right side of her head billowed out."

"From the sound I thought it was a blank and remember wondering to myself whether a blank could cause enough wind to blow your hair...."

"Instantly she jerked forward and her face fell on the desk. Then the picture went dead. I thought it was some sort of tasteless joke at first."

Shocked camera crews cut the show when they realized what had happened and the screen went black. The station continued broadcasting with public service programming.

Skitch Henderson enters innocent plea to charge of tax deduction fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — Conductor Skitch Henderson has pleaded innocent to a federal charge of fraud concerning a $350,000 tax deduction he claimed on a collection of musical scores and arrangements.

Henderson, 56, pleaded innocent here Monday to the charge which alleged he evaded $150,000 in taxes by taking the deduction for material donated to the University of Wisconsin.

Shopping carts are unsafe

Dear Mr. Nader:
As a frequent visitor to the supermarket (every three hours during the months of June, July, and August), I wish to call your attention to a vehicle that is unsafe when it is standing still: the grocery shopping cart.
As you may know, no license is required in any state to drive these little mothers. Anyone, regardless of age, vision, physical condition, or mental health can get behind the wheel. Occasionally, there is no one behind the wheel. These little irresponsible devils slam into cars in the parking lot without a driver in sight.
The grocery cart is turning supermarkets into a demolition derby. As proof, I offer my own personal observations on supermarket driving.
Point 1: Grocery carts are never parked. They are welded together as a group at the door and must be separated by jiggling, wiggling, and a good stiff kick in the old breadbasket. This possibly accounts for the body construction being weakened.
Point 2: A safety check would reveal there isn't a shopping cart that does not have all four wheels working. Unfortunately, all four are locked in the same direction so that when you drive the cart the steering mechanism will take you (a) into the path of an oncoming cart; (b) into a pyramid of 500 cans of dog food; (c) out the front door where you just entered.

Point 3: There are no seat belts for the children riding in the shopping cart seats. Thus, it is not unusual to have them lean into your cart and eat half a pound of raw hamburger before you discover they are there.
Point 4: Shopping carts take two to handle the situation. One to drive and one to gawk and read the caloric content of frozen lasagna.
Point 5: Passing in the supermarket is hazardous because supermarket aisles are built to accommodate the width of one and one-half carts. Thus, we encourage the reckless driver who fears the whipped cream topping in his cart is melting and who will purposely force your cart into produce.
And here's the shocker, Ralph. Shopping carts have no brakes. None whatsoever. I suggest you publicly recall all of them and women everywhere can shop in Corvairs until the aisles are made safe.

Yours truly,

The ailing house
Damage from parties really not that bad
BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

One of the very best minimizers of after-party damage is the first cup of coffee. By all means, before you go looking around to see what little horrors lie in wait after last night's hospitality, have a good breakfast and a cup of coffee well-brewed. Or your equivalent thereof.
Believe me, with this fortification, many accidents won't look so bad after all. Some may look dismaying, it's true, like a cigarette burn on a polished coffee table or one of those white rings from a wet glass. But armed with your breakfast and a few suggestions from this corner, maybe you'll get things fixed pretty easily.
We might as well start with perhaps the toughest one and get it out of the way. Referring to where a cigarette fell unnoticed from the ash tray and burned its length on the tabletop. To hide this, you have to remove the black mark and build up the depression level again. With care, patience and a razor blade, gently scrape away all the charred part. Probably this will take you down through the finish and stain, into bare wood. (be happy if it doesn't.)
With very finest sandpaper, smooth the cleaned depression, wipe off sawdust and carefully dab on a matching shade of stain. (Get this at paint or hardware store, and have the man show you how to do any color matching.) With small artist's brush paint on a prime coat of pure, fresh, white shellac. When dry, start the first of many thin coats of clear lacquer, letting each one dry thoroughly before light sanding and applying the next.
This is the way you fill up that depression. Takes time, patience and many coats. But you see how it can work, don't you? When level, give the tabletop a good polish and then ask anyone to try to find where the burn was. You'll be really astonished at how simple it will be to do this job.
Removing the white ring (or a spot left by a hot dish) is also mostly patience. With a small pad of felt soaked in camphorated oil and fairly well wrung out, gently rub the area, following the grain of the wood. You can use a pinch of powdered rosin or cigar ash as a mild abrasive. Keep this up until the spot disappears.
A burn on a nice carpet can look pretty awful at first. Of course it may be a bad one, going clear down into the backing. In this case, of course, there's nothing for it but to have a really good rug man cut the spot out and put in a plug of matching material. Some can do a masterly job at this, too.
But sometimes this can be a burn only affecting the top of fibers. In this case, snipping off those singed tips with sharp nail scissors will make that burn really vanish. The slight depression is almost sure to escape notice, unless someone deliberately goes looking for it.
Candle wax splatters on wallpaper can be ironed out. First scrape off all you can with a dull blade or small square-ended bit of wood. Next, hold a sheet of clean, white blotting paper over the spot and run your moderately hot iron over it. The heat melts the wax, and the blotting paper pulls it out. Often this can be done to perfection.
If over enthusiastic square dancers left black half moons on your nice floor with their bouncing heels, merely rub them with very fine steel wool and a cleaner-waxer preparation. They'll come out okay and the floor will still look waxed.
All of these mishaps can look pretty discouraging when viewed in the cold light of pre-coffee morn. So don't go looking for them until you feel really ready. That's when you'll find the repairs much easier to handle, too. (Copyright, 1974)

Tree growth
The length of time it takes for a hardwood tree to grow to maturity can range from 25 to 100 years. The industry is seeking ways to reduce the timeable to 20 to 50 years.

Ann Landers

Teen kicks four-year habit

Dear Ann Landers: I once read in your column about a girl, 17, who was being talked into following her boyfriend into the drug scene—or else. I agreed with your reply, but being in the drug scene myself, I knew what her boyfriend and others like him would say. "Ann Landers is crazy..." or "What does she know?" Their favorite comeback is, "If you haven't tried it, don't knock it."

I tried it—for four miserable, rotten years—so I can knock it. I can also tell every fox and dude out there that it can kill you. I've been on every kind of buzz you can imagine. At times I was so spaced out I couldn't see straight for days. It was like being in a hollow hole in the ground with no way to get out.

But I did get out and it was religion that saved me. I'm 17 now and I believe in miracles. One morning, a few months ago, I woke and decided to give my life to Jesus. That feeling was so strong it knocked out my craze for junk. I know this sounds impossible, but it's true. Please print my letter, Ann. It might help somebody who is back where I was four years ago.—Free At Last

Dear Free: You're 17 and off the junk after four years? This means you were 13 when you started—hard to believe, but I do believe it, because I've heard from the people who work at drug centers that some kids who come in for treatment are still in junior high school. I've also received many letters from the kids themselves—and their parents.

If you were saved by Jesus, I say, "Hallelujah!" I'm for whatever does the job.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I both have dark hair and dark eyes. Our child, aged six, is a sandy blonde with blue eyes. She resembles my father's side of the family. I resemble my mother's side.

We moved to this community last year and people are forever making stupid remarks, such as, "Is she adopted?" or, "Is the child from a previous marriage?" I really do a slow burn, but I hate to go into detail about her grandfather's family being blue-eyed blondes, etc., etc. If it doesn't bother us, why should it bother them?

I don't want to make enemies out of these new acquaintances, nor do I want to raise questions by being evasive. What should I say?—Irritated

Dear Irr: Simply, "Our daughter resembles my father's side of the family, all blue-eyed blondes. I take after my mother."

Dear Ann Landers: I am a widower with four married children, three boys and a girl. A few weeks after my wife died I told the children, "Your mother had four beautiful pieces of jewelry. You all know her large diamond engagement ring belonged to her mother, so it's going to Mary. I hope she will hand it down to her daughter." I then explained that their mother's cocktail ring would go to the oldest son, the diamond wedding ring to the next oldest, and the wristwatch to the youngest.

Since I made those statements some relatives have told me that all the jewelry should go to Mary because the boys' wives are not blood relatives and therefore not entitled to family heirlooms. My three daughters-in-law are fine girls and I want to do the right thing. What is it?—Concerned

Dear Concerned: Stick with your original plan. Daughters-in-law are entitled to heirlooms. Furthermore, equitable distribution among children makes for a much better family feel.

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting—What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright 1974)

Blood stains can be removed

With warm weather now upon us and the increase in outdoor activities, laundry problems will be growing by leaps and bounds.

Skinned knees, knocked noses and cut elbows in addition to a few tears carry with them one of the most difficult problems to deal with at the washing machine—the bloody nose.

More clothes are probably discarded for blood stains than for any other reason, except for wear, according to Virginia White, home laundry expert.

Blood, like any other type of stain, in most instances can be taken out of clothes if the proper procedure is used.

First immerse the stained area promptly in cold water. Allow it to soak for a minimum of 45 minutes. During the soaking period rub stain occasionally to loosen it.

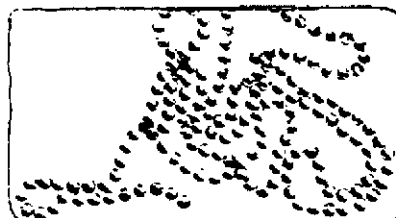

Next, machine wash the garment in the hottest water the fabric will allow adding ½ cup of heavy duty laundry cleanser, ¼ cup non-chlorine bleach and one cup nonphosphate laundry detergent.

If the stain is not fresh, rub with a paste mixture of table salt and water. Let stand for about one hour. Then follow the immersing and laundering procedure.

Clothes hamper odor becomes especially conspicuous in the summer months.

Freshen the hamper by following these suggestions from a laundry expert.

First, clean hamper inside thoroughly with a heavy duty laundry detergent and water. Use a damp sponge to avoid saturating wood or wicker. Allow to dry thoroughly in a shaded area out of doors, if possible. Spray with disinfectant.

Paint hamper insides with clear lacquer to prevent future absorption of odors.

Hang an air deodorant ball inside hamper lid or any other place where depositing laundry won't be obstructed.

Allowing just-worn underwear and shirts to "air out" over shower rod for even an hour will help prevent build up of odors.

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Gout can affect any joint, not just big toe

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband, in his 30s, has been going to a doctor for a bad back. He recently had a blood test. The report showed his uric acid was 14, while the doctor claims even a reading of eight is high.

The doctor also says the condition, which has settled in his lower back, is gout. My husband is now on a strict diet to help bring the uric acid level down.

Can gout be cured and what dangers are involved with such a high level? I have been told by hearsay it can be dangerous to the heart, liver and kidneys. Is this true? — Mrs. L.O.

For whatever reason, a great many folks assume gout is something somebody else will get — so forget it. But people do get gout, and when they do they suddenly want to know about it. That's why I have a booklet, "Gout, the Modern Way to Stop It." I suggest you send 25 cents and a long stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy.

Briefly, some folks just don't eliminate as much uric acid as they should. Sooner or later this results in the formation of tophi, or crystals, in various joints. That can be mighty painful.

The stereotyped notion of gout is that of a retired, testy British general with his foot propped up and bandaged. The only correct aspect of that picture is that the big toe is the joint most frequently attacked by gout. But gout can cause trouble in any joint in the body, including the back, although that is not so common.

The primary result of gout is pain, which comes and goes periodically. It doesn't menace the heart or liver, but it is notorious for causing kidney stones.

In my experience, moderate attention to diet is advisable. Limit foods containing purines, since they contribute to uric acid. But, as you will read in the booklet, it is even more important to use one or another of the medications which reduce uric acid and keep it down. There is no "cure" for gout, but in the vast majority of cases, with the medications now available, it is possible to keep the uric acid low enough to avoid the painful episodes which otherwise would occur. In other words, it can be controlled.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My eye doctor said I did not need my glasses changed after he tested my eyes, but I have little black spots. He called them floaters, but doesn't know what to do for them. The floaters blur when I am reading, especially in glaring sun.

Do you know what can be done for them? Are there eye doctors that would know? — Mrs. L.S.

Ordinary, garden variety floaters can be a nuisance, but other than that, they aren't harmful. And while they sometimes go away spontaneously, there is no known way to make them do so. So just don't worry. The brighter the light, the more obvious they will be. You were wise to have the eye examination.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple. Write to Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy of his booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

Cereals don't increase tooth decay

BOSTON (AP)—A new study on breakfast cereals and tooth decay says those chocolate-covered munchies and sugar-coated crunchies may not be as hard on children's teeth as cereal critics say.

Researchers at the Forsyth Dental Center say they tested 979 children who ate dry cereal and, contrary to other research, found no increase in tooth decay linked to either regular or presweetened cereals.

While the researchers concede that sugar is a well-known villain in tooth decay, the report appearing in the April issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association says eating cereal with milk and other foods appears to lessen the risk.

Dr. Robert L. Glass, principal investigator and head of the Forsyth Center's epidemiology department, said Wednesday that tooth decay produced by foods, including cereals, may not be highly correlated with the sugar content alone.

Glass said that such other factors as consistency of the food and other foods eaten at the same time may be as important as the content of sucrose and other sugars in determining how foods may contribute to tooth decay.

The study, initially funded by the Kellogg Co. cereal manufacturers, says that having milk with dry cereals appears to affect their decay-producing potential. Glass said that independent studies show that 90 per cent of presweetened cereal, the favorite of children, and 98 per cent of other cereal is eaten with milk.

"Cereal is eaten with milk that has calcium in it," Glass said, "and this may act as a buffer to the sugar, help to wash down the sugar and tend to make the cereal less sticky so that it doesn't stay on the teeth."

Other dental authorities contacted about the Forsyth study said the majority of other research was critical of ready-to-eat cereals from both dental and nutritional points of view.

"Sucrose has shown in many studies to be a major culprit in dental caries (decay)," said one dental expert, "but if the point of this study is that moistening cereals helps carry them and sugars away (from the teeth), then there may be something to this lessening the risk of caries."

Glass said previous research has shown that sweet food that sticks to teeth promotes more decay than food that passes out of the mouth quickly. Other research, he added, further showed that sweets taken at mealtime appear less damaging than those eaten alone between meals.

The Forsyth study involved children aged 7 to 11 years in eastern Massachusetts communities with little or no fluoride in the drinking water.

The over-all tooth decay patterns of low cereal-consuming children who ate less than 10 boxes a year and high consumers who ate from 20 to 90 boxes a year were similar to the decay patterns for all Massachusetts children of similar age groups, Glass said.

Navy Capt. Herman J. Bushman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman J. Bushman Sr., 1107 W. Fifth St., Appleton, has been awarded the Legion of Merit citation.

Bushman received the honor for exceptional conduct as special assistant for the Arms Control Office from November, 1969, to July, 1972.

Bushman contributed to the development of the national negotiating positions on the Seabeds Arms Control Treaty, biological weapons convention, chemical warfare, comprehensive test ban and the law of the sea issues.

He is a 1943 graduate of St. Mary High School, Menasha.

Airman Robin J. Wittman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robin J. Wittman, 122 W. 13th St., Kaukauna, has been named PRIDE (Professional Results in Daily Efforts) Man of the Quarter in his unit at K.I. Sawyer AFB, Mich.

He is a 1972 graduate of Kaukauna High School.

Richard Balza, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Tony Balza, 1119 E. Lindbergh St., Appleton, has been promoted to Air Force staff sergeant while stationed in Germany.

Balza, a 1969 graduate of Xavier High School, is a radio equipment repairman.

After completing two years of duty with the 97th General Hospital, Frankfurt, Germany, the newly promoted Capt. Margaret Gosz Garefino, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Army Medical Center, Washington, D.C.

Pvt. Shellie A. Van De Hey, daughter of Mrs. Helen M. Van De Hey, 1600 S. Memorial Drive, Appleton, has graduated from the newly established Women's Army Corps training center at Ft. Jackson, S.C.

Navy Seaman Frances R. Schroeder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis M. Schroeder, 304 N. Parkway Blvd., Appleton, has graduated from recruit training for women at the Naval Training Center in Orlando, Fla.

Marine Pvt. Brian Christensen, 18, son of Mrs. Carl Trembl, 124 S. Joseph St., Appleton, recently graduated from basic training at San Diego, Calif.

quired a working knowledge of various kinds of communications equipment and systems.

He will be assigned to Malmstrom AFB, Mont., for duty with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

Ohman is a 1971 graduate of Appleton High School-East.

Dennis Bellin, 19, 813 E. John St., Appleton, has enlisted in the Air Force's delayed enlistment program.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Bellin, 1503 N. Clark St., Appleton, is a 1973 graduate of Appleton High School-West.

Bellin will enter active duty in the Air Force Sept. 24. He has selected the inventory management career area for training after completing six weeks of basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Two Appleton men to graduate from program at Marshfield medical clinic

MARSHFIELD — James Siddall and Daniel Zimmer, both of Appleton, will be among 10 students graduating July 29 from the physician assistant program at the Marshfield Clinic Foundation for Medical Research and Education.

This class is the first to graduate from the program, the only one of its kind in Wisconsin, developed to assist the overburdened health care system by increasing health manpower in rural areas of the United States.

Both men were medics in the military before joining the physician assistant program in 1972.

As physician's assistants, Siddall and Zimmer are most likely to find employment in a small rural community working for now overburdened general practitioners. The extent of their work will depend largely on the physicians for whom they work.

Police and fire beat

NEW LONDON — Larry J. Jennerjohn, 21, route 1, Hortonville, was taken to New London Community Hospital for treatment of head and back injuries he sustained in a single-car crash on County Trunk S near Alcan Road about 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

Police said Jennerjohn was driving east on S and apparently fell asleep. His vehicle went through a ditch and up a steep incline, passing through a fence and traveling about 500 feet before coming to rest in a field.

James M. Busch, 20, 2730 S. Greenview Ave., was listed in satisfactory condition at Appleton Memorial Hospital after his motorcycle crashed into a car at Richmond Street and College Avenue about 2 a.m. Sunday. Police said Busch sustained internal injuries.

They said he was traveling west on College at an apparently high rate of speed and struck a car, turning from the eastbound lane of College onto Richmond, driven by Ronald J. Busch, 22, 206 W. Winnebago St.

Reds halt Cardinals, LA margin cut to 7 1/2

BY HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

In the immortal words of Yogi Berra, who should know, "You're not out of it until you're out of it." In the immortal words of Sparky Anderson, "I don't really think about it too much."

Wanna bet? Anderson's Cincinnati Reds, who trailed Los Angeles by 10½ games less than a week ago, climbed to within 7½ of the front-running Dodgers in the National League's West Division by blanking the staggering St. Louis Cardinals 3-0 Monday night behind Clay Kirby's nine-hit pitching.

In the only other NL games, the Pittsburgh Pirates ended the Houston Astros' six-game winning streak 3-1 and the Chicago Cubs scored four times in the ninth inning to defeat the Atlanta Braves 7-3.

The surging Reds have won nine of their last 11 games while the Dodgers

Roscoe Pondexter signs with Squires

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association have signed Roscoe Pondexter, a 6-foot-6, 235-pound forward from Long Beach State.

Coach Al Bianchi said Monday the Squires, who are rebuilding under new ownership, acquired rights to negotiate with Pondexter from the ABA's Denver Rockets.

Terms of the contract were not announced.

Pondexter, who had one more years' eligibility at Long Beach State, became eligible for the pro draft as a hardship case.

have dropped three of four. A few more numbers like that and the runaway Dodgers may start sneaking a few peeks back over their shoulder.

"We've got 70 games left, but we're a long way back," Anderson said. "But I'm not giving up. We've got nine games left against them. They might beat us all nine, but we've got a shot."

The Reds broke through Alan Foster with two out in the second inning. Dave Concepcion drew a walk and scored on Ken Griffey's hit-and-run double. Joe Morgan slammed his 12th home run of the season in the eighth and the Reds added a run off Mike Garman in the ninth on singles by Concepcion and Cesar Geronimo around a sacrifice.

Pirates 3, Astros 1

Dock Ellis scattered eight hits for his first victory in a month.

The Pirates tagged loser Dave Roberts for two runs on five singles in the fourth inning, including run-scoring hits by Manny Sanguillen and Frank Taveras. They added an unearned run in the seventh on another single by Taveras, a sacrifice, an infield out and an error by second baseman Tommy Helms.

Cubs 7, Braves 3

Andre Thornton's two-run single highlighted Chicago's four-run ninth inning as the Cubs ended a four-game losing streak. A bases-loaded walk to Billy Williams broke a 3-3 tie and preceded Thornton's hit.

Williams eventually scored the final run on a wild pitch.

American League scores: Oakland 6, Baltimore 4; Kansas City 3, Boston 2; California 4, Cleveland 2; Minnesota 4, Milwaukee 3; Chicago 3, Detroit 2.

Dizzy Dean stricken by severe attack

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Baseball Hall of Fame pitcher Dizzy Dean remained in guarded condition today after suffering a severe heart attack, hospital officials say.

Dean, 64, was admitted to St. Mary's Hospital Sunday night with chest pains, and later suffered a major attack, said Ed Spoon, a hospital spokesman. Once, he said, Dean's breathing stopped, but it was restored through resuscitation.

Spoon said Dean probably would remain in the hospital for an extended period of time.

Dean first complained of chest pains last Thursday in nearby South Lake Tahoe, Calif. He entered a hospital there and was released only a few hours before suffering the attack in Reno.

The pitcher compiled a 150-83 lifetime record during 12 years in the major leagues with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Browns.

He later became a sports broadcaster.

Former state women's champ leads qualifiers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Vicki Zimmermann of Milwaukee, who won the state Women's Golf Championship in 1971 but has been out of the state much of the time since then, led qualifiers for this year's meet Monday.

Miss Zimmermann, who attended the University of Texas and then took a job in Kansas City before returning to Wisconsin last month, posted a two-over-par 78 at Ozaukee Country Club.

"I haven't been playing well lately, so I've got to be pleased. I haven't played but about 10 times this year," she said. "Golf is a game you've got to keep working at. You have to practice more than you play."

Linda Rice of Milwaukee, who formerly lived in Cedar Rapids and is a veteran of the Iowa women's tournament, posted an 80 for the runnerup score in her first Wisconsin meet.

Sally Bower of Waterford was third at 82 and Kathleen Curran of Wauwatosa was tied at 84 with Martha Nause of Sheboygan and Debbie Lindsay of Madison.

Miss Curran took a nine on No. 18 after her second shot on the hole went out of bounds by inches.

"I guess I worried about it too much," she said of the out-of-bounds shot. "I'm glad it was the last hole."

Cindy Swift of Waterford and Sue McAllister of De Pere finished with 85s, and Mrs. F.H. Babbitt of Green Bay and Rosemary Iverson of Wisconsin Dells posted 86s.

The final four spots went to Linda Stack of Madison, Sheila O'Connor of Milwaukee, Rita Houston of Green Bay and 1973 runnerup Nancy Feifarek, who all had 87s.

Henderson, Gossage tame Tigers

CHICAGO (AP) — Ken Henderson was looking for something down his power alley and he got it. Rich Gossage had been looking for two years and now he's getting it.

Henderson slammed his 11th homer of the year with one out in the ninth inning Monday night to give the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Gossage, who hadn't won a game since September of 1972, suddenly can't get out of his own way. He was the winning pitcher in relief and now has won two games and saved another in the last four days.

"When you're hot, you're hot," chirped Gossage who came in with the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the eighth and runners on second and third. He went to work on pinch batter Dick Sharon and fanned him on three pitches.

"They were all fast balls," said Gossage. "It feels so strange. Suddenly I'm relaxed. I feel good. I feel the ball and I'm letting it do things."

Henderson admitted he was looking for a ball in his power alley. "It was a fast ball down the middle, the type of pitch I can handle. I've hit him good in the past so I was looking to get at least an extra base hit."

Henderson hammered it into the upper deck in right field and now has 10 homers batting lefthanded and only one righthanded. How come?

"I get my base hits righthanded but lefthanded pitchers throw me a lot of sinking stuff. I've always had better power hitting lefthanded."

The victory was the fourth in five games for the rejuvenated White Sox while the Tigers, sorely missing injured slugger Willie Horton, have dropped seven of their last eight games.

Bar Johnson, who was making his third start and seeking his third victory in nine days since returning from the minors, had a four-hit shutout going into the eighth inning.

Singles by Gates Brown and Ed Brinkman, an infield out and a two-run single by Gary Sutherland tied the game. Skip Pitlock came in and Marv Lane reached on an error by shortstop Bucky Dent. Both runners advanced on a fly ball before Gossage came in to get Sharon on strikes.

"I was reluctant to take Johnson out," said Manager Chuck Tanner. "He's done such a great job. But the situation dictated it. Then when they had men on second and third and Sharon came up, we went with Gossage for the bundle. He got Sharon and that was the game."

Gossage's relief success in the last four days is magnified by the fact that Cy Acosta has been put on the disabled list because of a growth on his eye and Terry Forster is being rested because of a sore arm. Tanner wants to save Forster until after the All-Star game so the relief burden is now on Gossage and Pitlock.

'So close, and yet so far' for Garland

BY KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Play it again, Sam, for Wayne Garland.

"This has to be the most disappointing loss I've ever had," the Baltimore pitcher noted Monday night after dropping a 6-4 decision to the Oakland A's. "I was so close to being in the record books ... and yet so far away."

The deluxe Oriole rookie was understandably depressed. Not only had he lost a game—but a no-hitter and a shut-out as well, all in the ninth inning! Garland was in command with a 4-1 no-hitter until Dick Green, reactivated from the disabled list just before game time, singled on an 0-2 count leading off the ninth.

By the time the A's were finished, they had knocked Garland out of the game and shelled two more Oriole pitchers for five runs.

In the other American League games, the Chicago White Sox whipped the Detroit Tigers 3-2; the Minnesota Twins nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3; the Kansas City Royals downed the Boston Red Sox 3-2 and the California Angels tripped the Cleveland Indians 4-2.

White Sox 3, Tigers 2

Ken Henderson's one-out homer in the ninth inning powered Chicago over Detroit. Henderson drove his 11th homer of the baseball season into the upper deck right field seats off Lerrin LaGrow, 7-8.

The Tigers had tied the game 2-2 in the eighth on Gary Sutherland's two-run single. Rich Gossage, 2-3, was the winner.

Royals 3, Red Sox 2

George Bett highlighted a three-run second inning with a two-run double to help Kansas City beat Boston.

The Royals scored their runs off Reggie Cleveland, 7-7. Their winning rally was started on a two-out walk to Tony Solaita before the next five men reached base.

Winner Nelson Briles is now 2-3.

Angels 4, Indians 2

Nolan Ryan broke a personal three-game losing streak with last-inning relief help, leading California over Cleveland.

The Angels took a 2-0 lead off Steve Arlin, 2-4, in the second inning on a run-scoring single by Ortado Ramirez and an RBI fielder's choice by Mickey

Jackson sets record in All-Star voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Reggie Jackson of Oakland leads seven returning veterans and one newcomer elected today to the American League squad for major league baseball's 45th All-Star game July 23.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced that Jackson received an unprecedented 3,497,358—the highest for a single player in All-Star history—of the record 6,545,712 votes cast by fans nationwide.

"It's great to get more votes than Henry Aaron or Johnny Bench, to be recognized by the people," said Jackson.

"It's a nice feeling, and gives me confidence to play ball better," he added. "I'm thankful the fans have given me a boost."

Brooks Robinson of Baltimore, who won the balloting for the third base spot and is a perennial All-Star, observed, "With the start Jackson has had, he deserves it."

Jackson's manager, Alvin Dark, had another thought.

"Even with that amount of votes, Reggie is underrated," the Oakland skipper said. "He should get all the votes and be a unanimous choice."

Jeff Burroughs of Texas got 1,546,766 votes as the runner-up AL outfielder and the only leader who was not a 1973 All-Star starter.

Bobby Murcer of New York got 1,539,335 votes to capture the final starting AL outfield berth for the night game in Pittsburgh. But Oakland's Joe Rudi was a close fourth with 1,347,545 votes.

Phils sign 14-year-old

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "He's a young guy and he's gonna be big," said Philadelphia first baseman Willie Montanez.

"He's the best school kid I've ever seen in my scouting," added Phillies general manager Paul Owens.

The two men are talking about Jorge Lebron, of Patillia, P.R., the 14-year-old infielder the Phillies have signed.

"He talked to Tony Taylor and three or four others from Puerto Rico and they just couldn't believe it either—at this young age with this type of action," Owens said Monday. The Phillies were in San Diego for three games with the Padres.

"We're going to bring him on slow. We don't have the idea of exploiting young kids," Owens said. He said Lebron, who doesn't speak much English, might be playing with the Phils in four or five years.

He is one of the youngest players to sign a professional baseball contract. Joe Nuxhall pitched for the Cincinnati Reds at the age of 15 in the 1940s.

The Phillies announced Monday that Lebron was assigned to their Auburn, N.Y., farm team of the New York-Penn league. He will report to Auburn Wednesday and be put on the inactive list, along with other young players familiarizing themselves with pro baseball.

"He'll turn 15 in September and will return to Puerto Rico to begin his freshman year in high school," said Ruben Amaro, the Phils' chief Caribbean scout who signed him. "We signed Jorge with the understanding he will complete his high school education while playing professional baseball. He'll go to school during the off-season."

Phillies scouts saw Lebron in a tryout camp in Puerto Rico and "We just decided he was so impressive we wanted to bring him up," Owens said. Lebron, 5-feet-10 and 150 pounds, is a right-handed hitting third baseman and shortstop.

Under baseball rules, athletes in the United States cannot sign with pro teams until they graduate from high school. But the rule does not apply to territories outside the country.

"We have to search where we're not restricted by the draft (rule)," said Owens.

Steve Garvey, a write-in, and Henry Aaron, a shoo-in, were at opposite ends of the voting but will be teammates on the National League team July 23 in the All-Star game at Pittsburgh.

In balloting announced Monday, the Los Angeles Dodgers' Garvey, a five-year major league veteran batting .312 this year with 65 RBI and 15 homers, received 1,082,489 votes for the first base position, the smallest total of any first-team All-Star.

Atlanta's Aaron, the major league's all-time home run king, got 2,636,250 votes, the most received by any NL All-Star.

"Just playing against Hank Aaron has been a tremendous thrill," said

Hudson tied for lead in bowling tourney

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Tommy Hudson of Akron, Ohio averaged 236 pins a game Sunday night to move from a 13th-place tie to the lead in the $47,000 Home Box Office Bowling tournament.

The 26-year-old right-hander, rookie-of-the-year in 1972, took six of his games and tied another as the first of three eightgame blocks was played.

Another two sets are on tape today to determine the five finalists for Tuesday night's televised finale, with $5,000 awaiting the winner.

Hudson spilled 1,894 on lines of 203, 193, 254, 246, 246, 237, 289 and 226 to gain the top spot in a strong semifinals line-up that included 13 champions in the 24-man field.

NFLPA seeks militant union, says rookie Allen

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — If there is one thing which Doug Allen understands more than football, it is strikes.

If you're confused by the issues involved in the National Football League players' strike, you're not alone. Allen doesn't completely understand them, either.

Allen was a star linebacker last season on Penn State's unbeaten, untied football team. He was a second-round draft choice of the NFL's Buffalo Bills.

Since Allen was graduated in December, he has worked for the AFL-CIO in Harrisburg, Pa., using his degree in labor relations.

Despite his labor education and his AFL-CIO experience, Allen admits he's confused by the NFL-Players confrontation.

"As I see it," Allen says, "the Players Association is caught in a bind. It's trying to act like a tough, unified, militant union like the Steelworkers, the Auto Workers or the CIO in the 1930s.

"They're trying to come up with an

WFL signings kept secret

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The World Football League has signed as many as 100 more National Football League players than the 45 already announced, General Manager Curly Morrison of the WFL California Sun said Monday.

Morrison said the Sun had signed four NFL starters whose names have not been announced. Bill Putnam, owner of the Birmingham Americans, said his team has signed 15 NFL starters but only five have been announced.

Checks with the New York Stars and the Memphis Southmen indicated five more unannounced signings.

The signings were reported in Tuesday's Los Angeles Times.

"There are a lot of reasons why the players don't want it out," said Stars General Manager Bob Keating of the signings, most of which are for the 1975 season. "They feel loyalty to their NFL teammates for this season—if there is one—and they just don't want to be barraged by reporters now, wanting to know why they jumped leagues."

"We're all sort of private about these signings," Keating added. "The Sun won't tell us who they've signed and I'm not going to tell them who we've signed."

Memphis General Manager Leo Cahill predicted more NFL players would jump to the new league.

individual solution to a fantasy world problem. Most pro sports are more or less a diversion to most of the guys. They know that the average career is something like four or five years."

Another problem, he says, is communications: "It's tough to communicate when you have a bargaining unit which is spread out all over the country, and only has a few thousand people involved. And that number changes from year to year.

"And what's more, the Players Association has never acted like a real union. It can't until it eliminates the individual contract. Until that happens it won't be like the steelworkers, who say they're going to shutdown the plant."

Allen says the rookies are in a tough position, caught between the Players Association, which has to keep the rookies out to make the strike effective and the rookies' desire to make the team.

"... And there's something else to consider," he adds. "A lot of rookies who got bonuses for signing are under obligation to report ... on time.

"If they don't, the club is not legally obliged to pay the bonuses. Quite a few of the rookies who got bonuses have already spent all or part of it, which means if they don't report to camp, they'd be forced to pay back money they're already spent. It puts us between the rock and the hard place, especially the ones who are married and have a family."

Allen notes that the position of rookies is even more uncomfortable, since they don't belong to the union. Rookies aren't admitted to the Players Association until they make the team.

Allen adds, however, that his sympathy is with the union.

Reschke, Vernon share pin lead

Roger Reschke blasted a 257 game and Jerry Vernon had a 868 series for four games to share honors in the Super Bowl's 3-Man Scratch Mixed Summer Bowling League.

Vernon had a 226 singleton and Reschke finished with a 828 series. Harland Shorey had 794, Ken Gradl hit 225-790, Ron Siebers fired 244, Jim Springer 777 and Bob Moberg had a 229 line.

In the Flower League at the Super Bowl, "Corky" Hamilton slammed a 224 game and 574 series. Lana Wilson rolled 207-546 and Dee Kasperek had 213-543.

Dennis Eppinger had a 247 game for the lone honor score in the Booser League at the Super Bowl.

In the 41 Drinkers League, Jeannie Miller had a 200 game and 538 series while Judy Van Elzen rolled a 203 line and peak set of 560. Marie Eggert picked up the 4-10 split.

Appointment of Risser urged by Democrats

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Appointment of Sen. Fred Risser of Madison to the Wisconsin Supreme Court was urged Monday by his Democratic colleagues in the upper house.

In a letter to Lucey, written by assistant Senate Minority Leader Wayne Whitton, they cited his "expertise over a broad spectrum of law" as a reason for appointing him to the court.

"We, his Senate Democratic colleagues, have such a regard for Sen. Risser's ability, integrity and judgment that for the past seven years, we have chosen him as our representative as Senate minority leader," the letter said.

Risser is being considered for the spot being vacated by retiring Chief Justice E. Harold Hallows.

Bingo problems minor, state director says

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin's venture into legalized gambling has been as easy as saying "bingo."

That is the word from bingo czar Robert Hoskins. But he admits there have been a few wrinkles in the process.

The first license was awarded May 25 by the Bingo Control Board to the Menomonee Falls Knights of Columbus. More than 60 have been authorized since then, and Hoskins said 1,000 are waiting review.

The 1973 legislature authorized the creation of the five-member bingo board after voters approved the legalization of bingo for religious, charitable and veterans organizations in a statewide referendum.

Hoskins, a former Oconomowoc High School teacher, said the biggest problem is the new law's prohibition against the rental of tents for use during bingo events.

Profits accrued by an organization from bingo must be used for charitable purposes, he said, which is why the law forbids rental.

"Any money that the organization spends for the rental of a tent means that much less for charitable purposes," Hoskins said.

Another problem cited by Hoskins is that rules calling for licensing of bingo games exclude social bingo playing. Bingo played among friends, in nursing homes and in senior citizen centers is prohibited, whether a fee is charged or not.

"These people are faced with not playing bingo as a social game, which can be a lot of fun, or perhaps being in violation of the law," he said.

Hoskins said the board favors a provision being added to the law in the 1975 legislative session to allow some form of pleasure bingo games. He said he would like to see issuance of an annual permit for nursing homes and senior citizen centers for a picnic where bingo is played as a social game and possibly some donated prizes are given away.

But the problems are minor, Hoskins said, compared to the good bingo will do the state.

The contention, made by some opponents when the law was being considered by the legislature, that legalized bingo would rob the poor and bring organized crime into the state, has no foundation, Hoskins said.

Rather, bingo "helps build unity in the community," he stated. "Members of an organization get together to raise money for the good of the community and it brings people together in a common effort."

Hoskins pointed out cases of the American Legion supporting Badger Boys and Girls State, churches supplying their schools and Junior Chambers of Commerce paying for programs for the elderly with bingo funds as examples of the game's benefit to the state.

"There are a thousand and one things these organizations sponsor that do good," he said. "I have heard absolutely nothing against bingo."

The state itself will be making a profit from bingo. It receives a $10 per event license fee from each registrant, two per cent of the revenue taken in and a four per cent sales tax.

Hoskins estimated the state would take in up to $4 million in each of the first three years of bingo, while the Bingo Control Board's annual budget is only $205,000.

So far, Hoskins said, groups in Washington and Dane counties have made the most applications for licenses because they have a lot of rural communities with volunteer fire departments, legion posts and churches.

He added that the board has not prosecuted anyone for violation of the law, nor does he expect it will.

"As far as I'm concerned we really don't have too many wrinkles. Whatever's there we can work with," Hoskins said.

McKenna seeks to keep GOP opponent on ballot

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — In an unusual move, a Democratic state senator asked the state Elections Board Monday not to knock his Republican opponent off the November election ballot.

Sen. Dale McKenna said he believes the board should overlook the fact there may have been "irregularities" in nomination papers filed by Republican Robert Sundby, a Madison attorney.

In his letter to the board, McKenna said he also believes Sundby fully intends to reside in the 13th senatorial district, even though he may not now live there.

Sue Albrecht of Madison, secretary for the Democratic state party, said she will file a complaint with the board challenging Sundby's candidacy.

Sundby, who recently sold his Madison home, said he has been unable to move into a new Monona home because construction has not yet been completed.

"While there are apparent irregularities in his nomination papers because he evidently failed to establish residency in the district, I believe that the principle that all incumbents should receive fair and open challenges in each election should take precedence over such discrepancies," McKenna told the board.

"Further I am satisfied that my Republican opponent fully intends to move into the district upon the completion of his house," McKenna added.

Use synthetic sponge to make duck-bowl

BY CAPPY DICK
Any bowl can be converted into a duck-bowl flower holder by following today's fun-project ideas.

The bowl should not be too large for a duck's head and tail, which will be made out of synthetic sponge (Figure 1). Choose a colored sponge for the best result.

Use any bowl
Cut the tail and head to the shapes shown in Figures 2 and 3, making notches that will fit snugly over the edge of the bowl as in Figure 2.

A head should be glued to each side of the duck's head for its eyes.

Fill the bowl with short-stemmed flowers as in Figure 4.

If you prefer, you can fill the bowl with water and float a few flowers on top of it.

Either way you do it, the color of the duck's head and tail will add to the color of the flowers displayed. SEND FOR THIS CAPPY DICK PARTY BOOKLET!

First National Corp. has record six-month period

Continued growth of the member banks of the First National Corp., has resulted in record earnings for the six-month period ending June 30, Harold C. Adams, president of the Appleton-based bank holding company, has announced.

Net income for the period was $563,237, a 12.5 per cent increase over the same period last year. The income translates to per share earnings of $2.48, compared to $2.24 for the first six months of last year, reflecting a strong loan demand. Book value per share was $47.97.

Adams said loan demand among the corporation banks had been strong during the six-month period. Outstanding loans on June 30 reached a record level of $115,279,306, an increase of 16.1 per cent over the comparable 1973 period. It is anticipated that this heavy loan demand will continue into the third quarter of 1974, Adams said.

Negotiations to start on air rights lease

A preliminary lease arrangement for air rights over W. College Avenue is to be drawn up by Outagamie County Corp. Counsel William Schuh and Thomas Long as a starting point for negotiations for authority to construct a nightclub over the four-lane highway.

Long, who is proposing to build the facility just east of the county airport, told the highway committee Monday he was willing to accept a long-term lease for the air rights. He had earlier insisted on outright sale of the rights.

The developer had told the committee that to get financing for the project he would need something permanent. "I can't go on a 25-year lease," he said.

Schuh said he felt a lease would offer more protection to the county than the granting of an easement. Long had no objections.

Supv. Eugene Kloes asked Long if he had the financing for the project. "Are you ready to go?" he asked. Long said it was difficult to get financing commitments without approval to build. But, he said, "We are close to being ready as is possible now."

While no negotiations have started on how much the county will want for the air rights lease, at least one highway committee member felt it could be similar to airport land leases.

Supv. Robert Weyenberg said Air Wisconsin is paying four cents a foot for the land on which its hangar is located on a 99-year lease. Schuh said the last lease, for Arctic Cat, is for three cents a foot for the land under the hangar and 3 cents a foot for the parking area.

Schuh said he would try to have a preliminary lease drafted by about Aug. 1.

Opinion

THE Post-Crescent

Ehrlichman's conviction

The conviction of John Ehrlichman on charges of conspiracy and perjury adds one more Nixon Administration member to the growing list of individuals convicted of felonies or misdemeanors while in the employ of the President. But Ehrlichman differs in that he is much closer to the top — and he has refused to admit error.

Ehrlichman and three Cubans were convicted of conspiracy in the planning of the break-in at the office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, psychiatrist of Daniel Ellsberg. The apparent intent was to find something that could be used against Ellsberg. But Ehrlichman was also convicted of lying in relation to documents related to the White House investigation of the Pentagon Papers leak. Here is the first convincing break-through as to how juries may deal with those who lie or conveniently do not remember specific incidents.

Former Attorney General John Mitchell has had what some congressmen have termed a convenient loss of memory in his appearances before the House Judiciary Committee investigating the possible impeachment of Mr. Nixon. "He has what I call a convenient memory—it's selective," Representative George Danielson said. It was like "trying to nail a drop of water to the wall" to get information from Mitchell.

There were lots of things that Ehrlichman too didn't remember about all the events known as Watergate. At least one jury apparently doesn't believe that he has such acute lapses of memory.

The conspiracy charge, as this newspaper has pointed out many times, probably should not even be written into United States law. It is a catch-all apparently designed to try for a conviction when solid evidence of other crime cannot be had. Its drawbacks far exceed its value.

But perjury is something else again. The tenpins are beginning to fall.

Resolve the Speener matter

The status of Eugene Speener as superintendent of the Outagamie Health Center has been under a cloud for over a year now, ever since The Post-Crescent published a number of articles about the administration of the center.

There was a John Doe investigation which dragged along for four months. There was a perfunctory hearing in which criminal charges were dismissed on a judge's ruling later determined to be in error.

And then in March of this year the trustees of the center, with the approval of the county board, hired an attorney to conduct an impartial investigation of how Speener was running the $2 million a year operation.

The board appropriated $2,500 for the study. The trustees hired an attorney, who in turn engaged a private investigator.

The probe was completed early last month and the investigators filed multiple civil charges accusing Speener of misconduct, malfeasance, neglect, inefficiency and dereliction in office. The attorney told trustees there were more than sufficient grounds to fire Speener.

Trustees agreed that there appeared to be cause. The law requires they hold a public hearing before they decide if Speener should be fired. They set the hearing for June 26. Speener asked for and was granted a delay.

Now another month has passed and Sylvester Esler, trustee president, says he thinks the board, Speener's attorney and County Corp. Counsel William Schuh might be able to get together July 24 to set the ground rules for Speener's hearing—"if they decide there should be a hearing."

"If they decide there should be a hearing."

Really now. Enough is enough.

Liquor and college

It requires no gift of prophecy to suggest that there will be questions in the minds of many of their constituents about the apparent consent of the University of Wisconsin system regents to the consumption of hard liquor in dormitory quarters by students on the public campuses of this state.

The regents' decision on the policy ardently advanced by student government spokesmen was equivocal to the degree that they did not actually enact an ordinance to repeal existing rules against such use of liquor. They merely asserted the right of chancellors of the various campuses to make such decisions as may appear to them to be suitable, or, perhaps, convenient and politic.

But with such a record, we must suppose that chancellors will hesitate to stand against what is the judgment of the regents, on the one hand, and the pressure of student activists, on the other.

Public attitudes on the use of liquor have moderated substantially. When the age of majority in Wisconsin was lowered from 21 to 18 years, the principal issue in the argument was the political rights of younger people, including those in college. Yet there was a general awareness that the 18 year old vote would be accompanied by many other new rights of 18 year olds, and notable the right to buy and consume hard liquor.

But the question before the regents was not one of legal rights, but one of acceptable conduct of students as residents in dormitories built with public funds for the advancement of educational opportunity. In such circumstances, is there a true distinction in the minds of the young people involved between permitting and encouraging the use of liquor in what the people intended to be an academic environment?

Surely there will be many Wisconsin citizens and taxpayers supporting one of the most generous higher education budgets in the country who will be disappointed. The student with a thirst can find ample opportunities to quench it within a short distance of most of the campuses of our acquaintance.

John Wyngaard

Legislature becoming full-time job

MADISON—The vigor and the duration of the controversy during recent years about the tendency of the legislature to raise salary and emoluments for its members might have led to the belief that a seat in the Senate or Assembly is one of the most attractive available in Wisconsin elective politics for the ordinary politician.

Yet the filings for the Senate and Assembly fail to bear out the idea.

There were some critics whose strictures about legislative feather-bedding were so persistent that to accept them seriously would have led to forecasts of half a dozen or more aspirants for each open seat.

The number as now recorded is far less, and probably about average for that comparatively short period in recent history that has shown genuine two party competition replacing the half century or more of contests within one party for nominations that were the virtual equivalent of election in most of the state.

The fact is that the commitment of the man or woman who runs for the legislature today and expects to be elected is greater by far than in any previous time in Wisconsin's political history.

Salary and emoluments have been strikingly improved, indeed.

The successful legislative candidate in the fall will have a salary approaching $16,000 a year, ample expense allowances for Madison residence and travel, more office allowances than any predecessor, some pleasurable incidental travel at state expense, such goodies as publicity counsel, generous printing and postage privileges, and a telephone credit card, among other benefits that his father would never have known had he turned up to take a seat in either house 30 years ago.

But the terms of the job have changed drastically also.

Until a comparatively few years ago, legislative service even for those members who rose to leadership rank and additional duties flowing therefrom, could usually adjust the requirements to remunerative employment at home, in the office, factory, farm, or whatever.

Many members today manage such dual employment. But it is becoming more difficult.

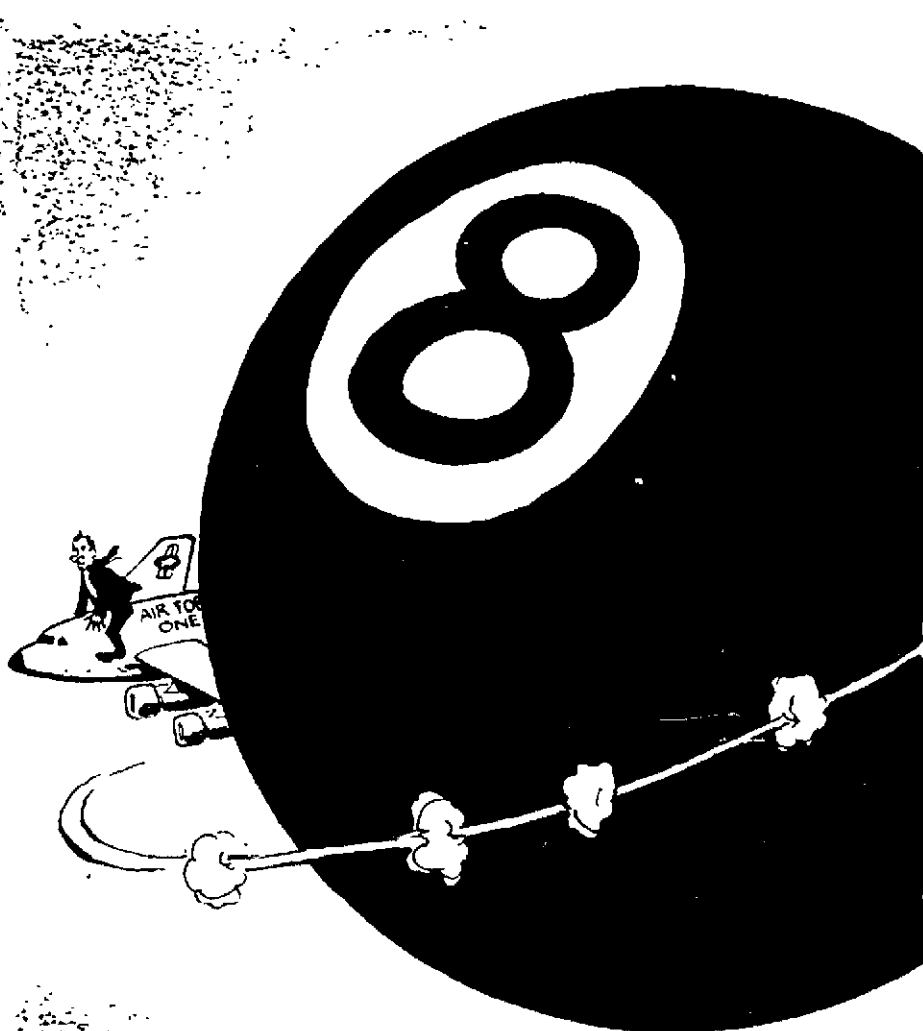

The state is rapidly moving into a fulltime legislative system. Perhaps half or more of the present legislature consists of members who are already professional legislators, in the sense that their state office is a primary occupation. Yet many of the members are young, and without other resources as typically represented by their more elderly seat-mates. From them has come the pressure for comparatively rapid escalation of pay.

Some critics, including this one, tend to be wary of the argument that longer sessions justify pay escalation that appears liberal over a comparatively short period. Are the protracted sessions necessary, or are they luxuries that the better paid youngsters of today can afford but their older predecessors avoided out of the need to return to their private occupations? But there are more issues, problems and bills.

The state has grown. The role of government expands. A serious study relating these and others to time and salary considerations would be useful—more useful than the knee jerk denunciation of "salary grabs."

The fact is that both parties must recruit, even as the football coach, and hard. Recruitment was always required to a degree. But in 1924, as a guess, the recruiters found it easier to enlist candidates for a paltry $500 a year than the party managers of today when they point to nearly $16,000 and "freebies" of ingenious variety.

"WHOEVER CALLED US INSCRUTABLE"

John P. Roche

Warren: a great chief justice

I doubt if even his most ardent admirers would claim that the late Chief Justice Earl Warren had a distinguished legal mind, but in my judgment he was one of the three ablest Chief Justices the nation has had — ranking after John Marshall and Charles Evans Hughes. As is generally the case with Supreme Court Justices who have not been professors of law, the legal quality of his opinions varied as a coefficient of the quality of his clerks. But as Chief Justice his talents were superb, particularly his sense of timing. With the possible exception of President Lyndon Johnson, Earl Warren did more than any American in the last 20 years to implement the fundamental principles of liberal democracy. If all the other decisions of the Warren Court were washed away, the desegregation and one-arm, one-vote holdings would justify this generalization.

Earl Warren was a hearty, outgoing man: the epitome of a first-class politician elevated to the Court. My first experience with him was both extraordinary and illuminating. In the fall of 1956, Brandeis University was celebrating the centenary of Justice Louis Brandeis, and Chief Justice Warren was scheduled to give the major address. Professor Leonard Levy, the distinguished constitutional historian now at the Claremont Graduate School, and I were asked to be his escorts. On the evening of the dinner we went to the Hotel Somerset in Boston to pick up the Chief Justice. We knocked on his door, and he opened it — attired in a T-shirt and undershorts.

Interesting but unfair

Levy, who had never gone over speeches with politicians as they lay in the bathtub or on the robbing table, was literally scandalized and turned to flee. "No, no," said Warren. "I'm running a bit late. Come in and sit down while I get dressed. If you'd like something to drink, I'll have it sent up." We declined and for 20 minutes or so talked about this and that. Then he said to me, "That was an interesting piece you wrote on Brown v. Board (the 1954 desegregation decision), but I think you were a bit unfair." I had attacked the rationale of the Chief Justice's opinion, arguing that desegregation was a matter of morality, not utility. The Court held segregation unconstitutional because it led to unequal education — my point was that even if it provided equal education, it would be unconstitutional.

I didn't know quite what to say, so I mumbled something to the effect that it was hard for outsiders to understand the workings of the Court. At which he said, "You are damned right. That was the only way I could get all nine on board. Felix (Frankfurter) almost drove me crazy. He felt his honor was at stake." (Frankfurter had earlier bitterly opposed the Supreme Court behaving as a "national school board.") In casual fashion he continued, without malice, to discuss the inner workings of the Court, of the problems he had getting a common denominator that would keep nine judges from writing nine opinions. It was clear that he was not interested in what Chief Justice John Marshall would have condemned as "the speculation of idle philosophers," but — like his great predecessor — with the role of the Supreme Court in the American political system.

Masterly ambiguous

What this often called for was a masterly display of decisional ambiguity. Once again in Marshall's footsteps, Warren on occasion could write an opinion declaring some action unconstitutional without ever explaining what clause of the Constitution or Bill of Rights was involved. (Those seriously interested in Warren at his ambiguous best should read his opinion in Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 1967. While not quite up to Marshall's spectacular broken-field running in Fletcher v. Peck, 1810, it is a wonderful performance. The underlying premise was that since New Hampshire's action was manifestly unconstitutional, there must be a constitutional principle that could dispose of it.)

I last saw the retired Chief Justice in Washington about six months ago. He looked unwell, but was busy mobilizing opinion against Chief Justice Warren Burger's pet scheme for a National Court of Appeals which would filter all cases coming to the Supreme Court. Characteristically his concern was with the role of the Supreme Court in our system: "By God," he said, "let them do their own work. They're not just paid to sit there and think deep thoughts." A great Chief Justice — may his tradition never be forgotten.

Looking back

Tom Hadd author of Indian tale

100 YEARS AGO
Appleton Crescent, July 18, 1874.

Gen'l Ginty of the Chippewa Herald brushes up his memory to this effect: "The Appleton Crescent speaks of a 'Teluah Spring' near that city. Teluah? Let's see, that was the title of an Indian story Tom Hadd wrote for the Appleton Crescent when Rolla A. Law was political editor.

"We can just remember it. That was when Tom was a student, full of romance and early tradition of 'the noble red man.' Who would think, to see the steady and talented lawyer now, that he was a 'romancer' in the days of his youth?"

The cows had been milked and turned out to pasture; 180 tons of new chopped hay, 80 tons old hay and about 1,000 bushels of oats were destroyed with the barn. Two trucks from the Grand Chute Fire Department answered the fire call and were assisted by a ladder truck and pumper from the Appleton Fire Department.

Convicts surrender after 105-hour courthouse siege

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two armed convicts, driven back by gunfire and tear gas in a desperate attempt to escape their besieged cellblock, surrendered to law officers Monday night, ending a 105-hour ordeal at the U.S. District Courthouse.

Hours after their frantic effort to find freedom by axing their way into a courthouse ventilation duct, Frank Gorham Jr., 26, and Robert N. Jones, 34, were flown to the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

Gorham and Jones had been inside the cellblock since Thursday when they seized eight hostages and tried to bargain for a freedom flight to Africa.

They released one of the hostages Friday and held the others as bargaining pawns until the seven fled Sunday in a daring escape engineered by one, a deputy U.S. marshal.

Stripped and handcuffed, Gorham and Jones gave up 36 hours later.

The final act of the drama began about 9 p.m. EDT Monday when they used an ax to hack their way into the air duct. For the first time since Gorham and Jones had barricaded themselves inside the basement lockup, officers exchanged gunfire with the pair, then used tear gas to force them back into their confinement.

No one was hurt.

Deputy district of Columbia Police Chief Maurice Cullinane, part of a force of about 20 District policemen and U.S. marshals who stormed into the cellblock area, said he persuaded Jones and Gorham to surrender.

"I was just talking to them through the door," he said. "Just rapping with them."

Cullinane said Jones and Gorham stripped and handcuffed themselves.

Then police entered the room, searched them and allowed them to dress again.

They were driven to nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md., where they were ushered aboard a Coast Guard jet parked 500 yards from where President Nixon boards the Spirit of '76.

Norman A. Carlson, director of the Bureau of Prisons, said it was his decision to send the men to the prison in Atlanta. He said the men had nothing to do with it, although authorities had talked earlier of sending them to a prison hospital facility at Springfield, Mo. The men objected to this.

Carlson said Atlanta was chosen because it was the federal maximum security prison closest to Washington. The men had asked for a prison on either the East or the West Coast.

"I'm from this coast and Rob's from the other coast," Gorham had said earlier in a telephone interview with a radio station. "So, I figure if I'm near my people or if we're near his people, we're both going to get checked out."

During the time they held the six men and a woman as hostages, Gorham and Jones demanded to be flown to freedom in Algeria.

Police and marshals with guns drawn patrolled the streets around the courthouse. A police helicopter circled the building, playing a high-powered light onto the roof and grounds.

Gorham, a convicted bank robber and one-time Vietnam paratrooper, and Jones, a veteran of a previous jail revolt two years ago, were reported in good condition by a police physician.

Gorham had lived up to 15 years in prison and Jones at least 10 years.

New regime sworn in on Cyprus

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cyprus radio said five cabinet ministers were sworn in today as part of a new government. It said the new regime would maintain an independent course and avoid any mention of union with Greece, largely thought to have been the aim of Monday's coup.

The broadcast said Nikos Sampson, named president by rebels, would oversee the overthrow of Archbishop Makarios, promised elections within a year and liberty and religious freedom for Cyprus.

The radio also said the new government would pursue a program of political and economic reforms, including citizens' control of essential goods, but no abolition of villages.

It said nationwide the total ban on movement of people and vehicles remains in effect.

In London, a British Foreign Office spokesman said information from Cyprus indicated sporadic shooting was still going on.

The spokesman said Britain still recognizes Makarios as president of Cyprus.

Makarios alive

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Minister James Callaghan told Parliament today that Archbishop Makarios, ousted as president of Cyprus in a military coup, is alive and has been given permission to enter Britain's sovereign base areas on the island.

There were cheers from both sides of the House of Commons as Callaghan told the lawmakers they would be greatly relieved to learn Makarios was alive.

The foreign minister said Makarios had requested permission to enter Britain's base areas on the island and that permission had been granted.

Cyprus. The statement indicated Britain does not propose to have any dealings with the organizers of the military uprising on Cyprus, and that Britain's influence will be directed toward a restoration of the authority of the Makarios government.

But this policy of support is likely to stop short of any military intervention.

The army rebels on Cyprus reported they were rounding up armed supporters of Makarios, but the archbishop was reported alive and broadcasting an appeal to America and Russia to help the Cypriot people resist the coup.

The armed forces of both Greece and Turkey remained on the alert, and reports from Cyprus said fighting between the rebels and supporters of Makarios was continuing.

In Vienna, Austrian Defense Minister Karl Lauegendorf said a report he received from the Austrian U.N. peace-keeping force on Cyprus said the insurgent forces appeared to be far from firmly holding power.

The minister, who said there was permanent radio and teletype contact with the Austrian contingent on the island, said that according to the report resistance against the coup seemed to gather momentum. He did not elaborate.

The minister also said the commanders of the Austrian and Swedish U.N. contingents were shot at but not hit during an observation flight over Nicosia Monday afternoon.

Lauegendorf said the gunners apparently did not know they were aiming at a U.N. helicopter. A spokesman for the Austrian Defense Ministry said the aircraft was not damaged.

In a statement in English broadcast by a station which said it was transmitting from the Cypriot town of Paphos, Makarios was reported to have said:

"I am still alive. The coup has not succeeded because the people of Cyprus are strongly resisting the usurpers."

The broadcast said Makarios accused the Greek government of instigating the coup because it wants to annex the island.

Pressure on IRS detailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee made public today the evidence its impeachment staff compiled on White House efforts to get the Internal Revenue Service to finish the enemies and help the friends of the Nixon administration.

Most of the material in the 440-page volume already had been made public by the Senate Watergate committee during its hearings last summer and in its subsequent reports.

The Judiciary Committee, which is scheduled to begin debate next week on whether there are grounds for the impeachment of President Nixon, began releasing last week the evidence it has received in closed sessions.

Eight volumes of evidence on the Watergate break-in and cover-up, including one from White House lawyer James D. St. Clair, were made public by the committee Friday. St. Clair submitted no material on the IRS portion of the inquiry.

Like the Watergate evidence, the material on the IRS was presented with no attempt to draw any conclusions or point up the significance of any particular item.

The IRS volume contained 27 "points of information" with each supported by one or more documents or excerpts from testimony.

They included affidavits from two former IRS directors who told the Judiciary Committee about pressures from White House aides to force the tax agency to obey their instructions.

The volume also included executive session testimony before the Senate Watergate committee in which John W. Dean III, former White House counsel, said "the President had asked it (the IRS) to be turned off on friends of his."

The evidence also disclosed that John Caulfield, a former Treasury Department and White House aide, regularly obtained confidential IRS information from Vernon D. Acree, the assistant commissioner for inspection for IRS.

An affidavit given the committee by Randolph Thrower, a former IRS director, on May 24, 1974, disclosed that Thrower had asked Acree in 1970 "to investigate the possibility of an unlawful disclosure of confidential tax information" to columnist Jack Anderson.

The investigation involved contributions to the 1968 presidential campaign of Gov. George C. Wallace and allegations that his brother Gerald Wallace had unreported income.

Thrower gave the information to Mark R. Mollenhoff, at the time a special assistant to the President, who assured him it had been requested by the President. Mollenhoff told the committee he had received such assurances from H.R. Haldeman then White House staff chief.

A few days after Thrower gave the Wallace material to Mollenhoff, who had since left the White House and returned to a job as Washington correspondent for the Des Moines Register, appeared in an Anderson column.

Thrower said Mollenhoff assured him he hadn't leaked the material.

"I stated, nevertheless, that I was greatly disturbed by it and wanted to know how it possibly could have occurred," Thrower said in his affidavit.

"Mr. Mollenhoff replied that the responsibility was at a higher level. I asked, 'How high?'

"His response was to the effect that it occurred at the highest level or at the very top," Thrower said he interpreted that to mean Haldeman or John D. Ehrlichman.

A second affidavit from Thrower described White House efforts to place Caulfield in key jobs at the IRS.

Thrower said he resisted hiring Caulfield. Thrower said he told Charles Walker, deputy treasury secretary, that "Mr. Caulfield's entry into the service (IRS) would be greatly prejudiced by the fact that many would view the move as a political one which would be greatly resented within an organization which had prided itself for so long on being wholly apolitical."

Subsequently, Thrower said "Dr. Walker advised that he had been asked by the White House to tell me that all of my views had been taken into account but that I was to be directed to proceed as they had been (sic) requested."

Thrower threatened to resign and the White House dropped the matter.

In January 1971, Thrower decided to resign and asked Treasury Secretary David Kennedy "that I first would like to discuss with the President my concern about White House attitudes toward the IRS."

Kennedy told Thrower he had been unable to arrange the appointment because "Haldeman had told him the President did not like such conferences."

One of Thrower's successors as IRS head, Johnnie Walters, told the committee in an affidavit dated May 6, 1974, that on Sept. 11, 1972, Dean asked him to initiate IRS investigations of a long list of individuals identified as contributors to or workers in the presidential campaign of Sen. George McGovern, Nixon's Democratic opponent.

Walters said Dean told him "He had not been asked by the President to have this done and that he did not know whether the President had asked that any of this activity be undertaken."

Walters said he told Dean the project "would be disastrous for the IRS and for the administration and would make the Watergate affair look like a 'Sunday school picnic.'"

Walters said he discussed the request with then Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and they agreed the request should be ignored.

St. Clair said the fact that the IRS did not audit McGovern's contributors shows that the President had not wanted that done.

"If the President decided to do so," St. Clair told newsmen, "He could have found a way."

A second Walters affidavit dated June 10, 1974, described pressure from Ehrlichman to get the IRS to find something on Lawrence F. O'Brien, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

From late 1971 through the summer of 1972, the IRS checked O'Brien's tax returns and financial records but found nothing out of order.

According to Walters, "Ehrlichman indicated disappointment and said to me, 'I'm goddamn tired of your foot dragging tactics.' I was offended and very upset but decided to make no response to that statement."

"Following the telephone conversation, I told Secretary Shultz he could have my job any time he wanted it."

The evidence also included documents and testimony before the Watergate committee that indicated that Caulfield had received confidential IRS information from Acree on the status of investigations of the returns of the Rev. Billy Graham and actor John Wayne.

Movers begin moving again in Pittsburgh and garbage is being collected again in Baltimore. But pickets continued to ground National Airlines today and a state employees strike spread in Ohio.

Some labor disputes were settled Monday but about 600 strikes involving a quarter-million workers continued to hamper private industry and government across the country.

It was the most strikes the nation has had in the post-World War II era, according to the Federal Mediation Service in Washington, D.C.

In Ohio, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees began an expanded strike today adding its 7,000 members to a strike that began more than two weeks ago.

Union leaders said they expected half of the state's 80,000 workers to honor their picket lines at state universities, government offices and other facilities.

AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor's patience with the worst peacetime inflation of the century appears to have broken, resulting in the biggest wave of strikes to hit the country since the post-World War II years.

"Workers want more. They feel they deserve more," Chief Federal Mediator W. J. Usery Jr. sums up the situation.

During nearly three years of wage controls, labor showed remarkable restraint in demands and settlements while inflation nibbled away at paychecks. But with the end of controls April 30, labor's militancy began to rise.

The Nixon administration predicted a rash of strikes and higher settlements but as the walkouts spread, one official said, "This is more than we bargained for."

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service counted 593 strikes last week involving 255,000 workers. This week the number topped 600, highest in any week since the late 1940s.

The new readiness to strike also is reflected in the cost of wage settlements, which federal mediators say are approaching 10 per cent. This compares to average settlements of 6.1 per cent in wages and benefits in the final quarter of 1973 while prices were rising at almost twice that rate.

Administration officials fear that a wage explosion will bring a return to cost-push inflation just as other inflationary pressures begin to subside.

Indeed, there already have been some eye popping settlements, particularly in the construction industry. Plumbers and pipefitters recently won a one-year 18 per cent pay hike while welders in Portland, Ore., won a 38 per cent increase in their hourly rate over three years.

AFL-CIO President George Meany says these developments shouldn't surprise anyone. "You can only push people so far," he said Monday in referring to the double-digit inflation rate that has seen retail prices rise almost 11 per cent in the past year.

Mediator Usery says inflation, has hit workers where it hurts most — in their food and fuel budgets.

"The individual worker is trying to keep ahead of the rising cost of living and is putting pressure on local union leadership to get the wages and benefits that will allow him to keep pace," he said.

While the number of strikes is high, most involve small companies or individual plants. Until the copper workers walked out this week there had been no major industry shutdown this year.

The steel, aluminum and can industries settled without a strike. And last month, for the first time in 30 years, East Coast dock workers came to terms peacefully.

But these settlements, although modest on the surface, are proving to be more expensive than first realized as cost of living clauses add to the cost of the wage package.

Escalator clauses intended to keep pay in line with prices are increasing and just about guarantee continued inflation as pay increases automatically follow price increases.

Contracts covering some five million workers were up for renegotiation this year. While most major industries have settled, some trouble spots lie ahead walkout that began at midnight Monday.

"We just want to let the public know that we're not behind our international organization in their endorsement of the federal strip mining bill," said a spokesman.

The legislation pending before Congress sets strict standards for reclamation of strip-mined land.

National Airlines' jets rested in their hangars again today as international Association of Machinists members manned pickets at a dozen airports from Miami to Los Angeles.

About 1,600 machinists, fuel truck drivers, stock clerks and inspectors struck National at midnight Sunday. The airline, which canceled all 155 flights to 45 American cities and London, said the strike was costing it $1 million a day.

William Spurlock, chief negotiator for the union, said "The real issue now is large benefits. The pay increase was not wholly satisfactory, but we do not participate problems on that."

Base pay for mechanics is between $6 and $8 an hour, and union officials said the two sides were near agreement on a hike of between 17 and 20 per cent. Negotiations were held in Naples, Fla.

The nation's No. 1 copper producer, Kennecott Copper Corp., reached a tentative agreement with a union of 26 unions representing 30,000 workers.

"Kennecott is the industry bell weather and we hope the others come forth with suitable offers as a result," said union spokesman Cass A. A. "I think there's reason to hope this may turn out to be the shortest copper industry strike in history."

Waupaca sheriff cites need for more men, unit merger

BY FERN SMITH
Post-Crescent staff writer

WAUPACA — Lack of manpower and inherent problems in the two law enforcement units in Waupaca County were cited as the principal reasons why Loran Frazier, incumbent sheriff and law enforcement officer here for the past 18 years, is not a candidate in the coming election.

"It is impossible to meet the demands of the public and county taxpayers for adequate law enforcement today under the present status of the sheriff's department," Frazier told The Post-Crescent, elaborating on the statement he had promised to make when he did not file his nomination papers for return to office one week ago.

"The people have been good to me over the years in Waupaca County, and I feel that I owe them my reasons for not seeking another term.

"Taxpayers have a right to expect more for their tax dollars from their police departments," the sheriff said.

"The public, too, has the right to expect better things from law enforcement in this county, and I challenge anyone to lay the apparent inefficiency at the door of the sheriff's department."

"It is strictly a lack of sufficient man-hours," said "This past month we received 136 complaints 54 of these were for burglary and theft, 18 for vandalism, three for property damage and seven for disorderly conduct. Twenty per cent of them were cleared. The national clearance average is 50 per cent.

"I do not have the man-hours to assign a man to a given problem and expect him to be able to work at it until he comes up with a solution," Frazier continued.

"It is a ridiculous situation," he said.

"I hope every taxpayer in this county will make it his personal responsibility to come to the offices at the jail and see for himself how Waupaca County law enforcement works," the sheriff said.

The sheriff's department has a chief deputy, a day investigator, a night investigator, a juvenile officer (whose salary is paid entirely by federal funds) and the sheriff to investigate crimes. The sheriff has the full responsibility for protection of the life and property of persons in Waupaca County, plus the task of policing 20,000 residents living outside of municipalities. In his "spare time" he can serve papers, recover property and supervise the operation of the jail.

"The jail, now operating at 85 per cent capacity, takes the full time of a jailer on each shift," Frazier pointed out. "Many of the prisoners now placed in county jails because of the relaxation of laws governing the incarceration of prisoners formerly were sentenced to state prisons."

A majority of these prisoners, 17 at present, is allowed to work under the Huber Law, which means we find some of them jobs and get them to and from work," he said. "The jailer has inherited the job of dispatching the county force, which leaves him with little time for the job he was hired to do.

"I have briefly sketched some of the reasons why the sheriff's department needs additional help, but I feel more strongly that the taxpayers of Waupaca County can no longer afford the luxury of a two-department police unit," the sheriff declared.

"At present, we have a traffic department with eight men, who, under a statute passed in 1923, are delegated to patrol county highways and to enforce laws pertaining to traffic," he continued. Under that law, the traffic officers do not have full police powers. But to

Two die in parked auto

OSHKOSH — The bodies of a 26-year-old Oshkosh woman and a 33-year-old Neenah man were discovered late Monday afternoon in a car parked in a driveway on Maxwell Road in the Town of Vinland.

Winnebago County Coroner Duane J. Moore ruled the deaths of Karen J. Anderson, 814 Franklin St., and Dennis D. Decker, 7720 Rhyner Road, as accidental carbon monoxide poisoning.

The bodies were discovered in the unlocked vehicle at 5:40 p.m. by two Oshkosh residents, who rapped on the window but got no response.

Decker and Miss Anderson were taken by ambulance to Mercy Medical Center here, where they were pronounced dead on arrival at 6:55 p.m.

The couple had last been seen at 1:30 that morning in the Honey Bee Tavern on U.S. 45 in the area. Moore ruled the approximate time of death of 2:30 a.m.

The coroner said Decker had at least 10 gallons of gasoline in the car when the couple left the tavern. When the vehicle was discovered, the gas tank was empty.

Moore said that although a preliminary examination of the vehicle revealed that about a two-foot section of the car's tailpipe was missing, he will have a mechanic check the car thoroughly to determine the exact cause of the accident.

Decker, the father of four children by a former marriage, was employed by the Neenah Foundry. Miss Anderson was employed by SNC Manufacturing Co., Oshkosh.

Funeral arrangements for Decker are pending at Mueller Funeral Home, Winneconne. Arrangements for Miss Anderson are pending at Westgor Funeral Home, Neenah.

Parade in fair spotlight

AMHERST — Final preparations, including plans for a parade, horse shows, demolition derby and exhibition judging, are being made for this weekend's Portage County Fair.

Entries for exhibits will be accepted until noon on Friday, when reduced rates on rides will be in effect until 6 p.m. At 8 p.m. Friday, the 4-H Club talent show, highlighted by the crowning of the fair queen, will be staged.

Saturday's events include a parade to celebrate the fair's 25th anniversary since its rebirth and the Boots and Saddles Club horse show from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cattle judging will take place in the afternoon. Harness racing is planned for 5 p.m.

About 50 entries have been accepted for the parade, according to Mrs. Tom Kolbeck, chairman. The parade will start at noon Saturday at the high school on N. Main Street, proceed down to Wilson Street, County Trunk B and cross U.S. 10 to the fairgrounds. The parade will be led by the Amherst High School Band, under the direction of Stephen Miller. Floats, antique cars, horses, drum and bugle corps, a baton group and other entries will follow the band.

On Sunday, horse judging will take place, with harness races scheduled for 1:30 p.m. A demolition derby will be the final entertainment feature of the weekend, beginning at 8 p.m.

County decides against St. Mary convent use

Use of the vacant St. Mary Parish convent to house the Outagamie County Department of Social Services has been ruled out.

James Stamp, department director, told the social services board Monday that after taking another look at the facility he decided that "it almost makes it, but not quite."

He said he was disappointed in his findings.

To use the convent, he said, would require splitting the department and leaving one section in the courthouse.

"How many square feet do you need?" asked Supv. Daniel Verstegen.

Stamp said the department could function with an "efficient 10,000 square feet." The department would have almost that much space if the proposed annex remodeling is carried out.

Stamp said that while the convent has about 16,000 square feet, this includes corridors, bathrooms, furnace room and laundry room, reducing considerably the amount of usable space.

County Board Chairman Eugene Higgins suggested that the county might still look at the building as a juvenile detention facility. Supv. John Kellogg answered that the parish council has indicated it would not lease the building for institutional use. The county would have to buy it, Kellogg said, and the parish is not anxious to sell.

Stamp also reported receiving a preliminary contract from the state for the operation of the department after Jan. 1. The state is supposed to assume all of the cost of running the department at that time.

"Will they still need us?" Kellogg asked, referring to the county department. Stamp said the state is required under recent legislation to contract with the county. He labeled as "irresponsible attitudes" the opinions of some county officials who have questioned whether there still would be a county department after the state took over full funding.

The board also went on record favoring the county's leasing a boys' group home, rather than owning it. The present group home owner is pulling out of the business and has offered the home to the county. Other potential buyers have indicated they would be interested in buying the home if they were guaranteed a lease from the county.

Stamp said he personally favored leasing over buying. "Can we negotiate a more favorable lease with the new owners than we had with the former owners?" Verstegen asked. Stamp said he felt he could.

Activities coordinators plan session at Waupaca

WAUPACA — Activities coordinators from nine counties will participate in a daylong seminar Friday, spending the morning at Bethany Home and the afternoon at the Wisconsin Veterans Home, King.

As members of the District III Activities Coordinators Association, which was formed by individuals who direct activity programs in skilled nursing and intermediate care facilities, hospitals and other health facilities, they will meet to discuss the changing role, present papers and hold panel discussions on "Requirements and Interpretation" and will participate as patients in a "fun 'n' games" session.

Mrs. Luella Potter, president of the association, said the "Requirements and Interpretation" session will be conducted by Mrs. M. Betty Hobbs, R.N., and Mrs. Betty Zwicker, R.N., supervisors for District III, Wisconsin Division of Health; Miss Laura Braunell, O.T.R., Milwaukee, and Miss Betsy Sweeney, O.T.R., Madison with the Division of Patient Care Practices, Division of Health; Mrs. Muriel Ebenhoe, R.R.A., Appleton, a medical record consultant, and Robert I. Urban Telephone to change service

CLINTONVILLE — The Urban Telephone Corp. here has received permission from the state Public Service Commission to discontinue eight-party service to 4,013 customers on the Bear Creek, Bowler, Clintonville, Shawano and Tigerton exchanges operated by the firm.

The switch to fewer numbers of persons on party lines will require a cost estimated at slightly less than $636,000, according to a finding of fact of the Public Service Commission.

Rate increases would be instituted where service is upgraded and new revenues would increase the firm's annual revenue of all exchanges by $42,683, according to the Public Service Commission.

In its findings, the statement said, "The abandonment of all eight-party rural service, four-party rural business service, locality area service and exchange mileage charges at the Bear Creek, Bowler, Clintonville, Shawano and Tigerton exchanges of Urban Telephone Corp. is in the public interest, is required by public convenience and necessity and is consistent with the furnishing of reasonably adequate telephone service and facilities to the public."

The telephone company also received authorization to eliminate four-party business service in rural areas, locality area service and exchange mileage.

The firm had proposed offering a selection of one- or two-party residence and business telephone service at rural zone rates and four-party residence service at one flat rate in the rural zones.

There are 9,676 customers in the five telephone exchanges. Of that number, 4,013 customers are being served with eight-party telephone service.

The commission okayed establishment of three rate zones for each of the Bear Creek, Bowler, Clintonville, Shawano and Tigerton exchanges.

The new telephone rates would be: Bear Creek, Clintonville, Shawano exchanges: Business, one-party, zone one, $10.10; zone two, $11.10; zone three, $12.10; business, two-party, zone one, $8.60; zone two, $9.25; zone three, $9.90. Business, semipublic paystation, zone one, $12.60; zone two, $13.60; zone three, $14.60; business, PBX trunks, zone one, $14.40; zone two, $15.40; zone three, $16.40. Residence, one-party, zone one, $6.30; zone two, $7.30; zone three, $8.30; two-party, zone one, $5.30; zone two, $5.95; zone three, $6.60; four-party, zone one, $4.85; zone two, $4.85; zone three $4.85.

Bowler and Tigerton exchanges: Bu-ness, one-party, zone one, $9.10; zone two, $10.10; zone three, $11.10; two-party, zone one, $7.60; zone two, $8.25; zone three, $8.90; business, semipublic paystation, zone one, $11.60; zone two, $12.60; zone three, $13.60; business, PBX trunk, zone one, $12.90; zone two, $13.90; zone three, $14.90; residence, one-party, zone one, $5.80; zone two, $6.80; zone three, $7.80; two-party, zone one, $4.80; zone two, $5.45; zone three $6.10; four-party, zone one, $4.35; zone two, $4.35; zone three, $4.35.

The company also had proposed elimination of four-party business service in the base rate areas of the five exchanges. The change would have meant an increase in telephone rates for users. "The elimination of said service in the base rate areas was not noticed for public hearing, and applicant's proposal in this regard will not be authorized as part of this proceeding," said the findings.

Home owners warned about itinerant labor

WAUPACA — Home owners in Waupaca County have been warned by Sheriff Loran Frazier that they should be sure they know who is doing work for them and obtain an honest estimate of the costs before hiring such work done.

"There have been several reports that itinerants have been soliciting jobs and performing a few at high prices," Frazier said. "There is some question about the quality of the work. Then the person who hires them cannot find them, but it is too late," he said.

The sheriff investigated an incident Monday in the Scandinavia area. An elderly householder had reported that she had hired a man, about 40, to surface her driveway. He told her "it would not take much" to seal her driveway, which was deteriorating.

He proceeded to spray the driveway with a black substance and then asked for $175. She told him the price was too high, since the drive was 25 by 30 feet, and he explained that he would give it to her for a bargain price of $140. She paid him with $40 in cash and a $100 check, which he insisted be made out to cash.

Dinner for Lorge

Republican candidates for statewide office on the November ballot pose with State Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, during a fund-raising dinner for Lorge Monday night in Appleton. Lorge is running for attorney gen-

Lorge criticizes Lucey administration

State Sen. Gerald Lorge, Bear Creek, Monday charged Gov. Patrick J. Lucey with centralizing state government in Madison, and with using his veto power to "clearly reverse and frustrate legislative policies."

Lorge, the Republican candidate for attorney general, said Lucey has misused his line veto power on a number of occasions "to thwart, to alter and even to reverse the intent of the people's elected representatives and senators in the legislation they pass."

He also criticized the U.S. Congress for stalling its investigation of Watergate until the November elections for political reasons.

Lorge spoke in Appleton at a fund-raising dinner held in his honor. The dinner was attended by local Republican officials, Republican state senators and representatives and the Republican candidate for governor, William Dyke.

Lorge accused Lucey of being responsible for making Wisconsin's taxes the highest of any state in the nation, for promoting legislation which, he said, provided for a complete takeover of mental health and welfare services by the state, and for attempting to close down some prisons and set up unsupervised alternatives.

He also criticized Lucey's backing of certain unspecified bills relating to crime.

"If we (the legislature) had passed all the bills the administration asked for, we would have had a decrease of crime because many crimes would have been legalized," he said.

Lorge said Lucey misused his veto power to:

— Remove county authority over snowmobile trails, thus giving that control to the DNR.

— Prevent formation of an independent state agency to deal with problems of the elderly.

— Kill, with a partial veto, a state trunk highway improvements project.

— Reverse policy on university user fees to be assessed "only on hard-pressed students, rather than faculty, administrators and private individuals who would use university facilities—

— Weaken legislative controls over administrative rules.

He told the audience that the U.S. Congress had a "preoccupation with Watergate and corruption in government."

He later said possible government crimes should be investigated, but that Congress was spending too much time on Watergate while not concerning itself enough with other issues, particularly inflation.

"They are dragging this thing out to the November elections for political reasons," he said. "They should conclude it—cut the politics, get to the meat of it and bring it to an end."

Dyke spoke briefly, praising Lorge's record, and encouraging those attending to actively back the Republican party, which, he said, is in a "time of difficulty."

"It's easy to say, 'What's the use?' There are some. A lot of people have already said it, even Republicans, who would just as soon take a walk. We have way too much to lose," Dyke said.

Sugar prices sour profits of confectioners

By JOSH FITZHUGH
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sugar is leaving a bitter taste in some people's mouths this year. For others, it's sweeter than usual.

Since September, sugar prices have tripled, making consumers pay up to $2 for five pounds of the natural sweetener, as well as boosting prices for prepared foods which contain sugar.

And while the individual consumer's over-all bill for sugar may still not exceed $30 annually, the increase is creating serious problems for soft drink and candy manufacturers who need it in vast quantities.

A year ago the cost of refined sugar was around 10 cents a pound. In March many businessmen considered it high at 20 cents, and now it's jumped to 32 cents a pound, the highest level since World War I.

"If prices would just come down to 20 cents a pound I'd love it," says one businessman who recalls 3-cent-a-pound sugar. "If prices would only stabilize we could handle it," says another industrial consumer.

Life Savers Inc. boosted the price of its candy rolls from 10 to 15 cents this month, blaming a tripling in sugar prices. Other candy makers warn that 20- and 25-cent candy bars are coming if sugar prices remain up.

Poor weather, increasing demand in developing countries and slow production expansion are considered the primary reasons for the tight sugar markets and resulting high prices.

Analysts say commodity speculation and the playing of one market against another by producers have also pushed up prices.

For the past three years world sugar consumption has lagged behind world consumption, forcing refiners and industrial consumers to dig into reserves to meet their needs.

F O Licht, the leading sugar statistical firm, estimates that 1974 production of 81 million tons will again lag consumption by some 800,000 tons.

As a result, industry analysts see little likelihood that sugar prices will fall much soon, though they note a volatility caused by speculation.

"Given the outlook for the North American and European beet crop I'm thinking prices may stay high for another 15 months," says John Casstevens, a sugar specialist for Reynolds Securities, a Wall Street brokerage house.

"I think we're going to see a higher and longer price bulge this time," says Bill Cleaver, director of raw sugar operations for Amstar, the country's largest refiner. "There appears to be no substantial increase in production."

A spokesman for CPC International, another major refiner, says capital for new production will only be forthcoming if prices remain high. Besides, he says, "It's very difficult to get people to cut cane these days."

High prices and the profits behind them rattle those businessmen who have to pay the higher bills.

State task force to recommend changes in building code for blind

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A state task force on the problems of handicapped persons will recommend some changes in Wisconsin Building Code regulations for public buildings to benefit the blind, its chairman said Sunday.

Rep. James Wahner, D-Milwaukee, said the panel will suggest requiring raised numbers and letters on door signs, raised numbers on elevator buttons and public telephones and special knobs on doors leading to such hazardous areas as boiler rooms and loading docks.

Wahner also told residents of a nursing home for the visually handicapped that the committee will recommend a motorist who commits a traffic violation involving a blind pedestrian be given an extra point on his driving record.

The task force's report is to be presented Friday to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

Care centers sought for delinquents

CABLE, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin's juvenile court judges were told Wednesday that there was an urgent need for county-operated juvenile shelter care centers.

Charles Rucker of Appleton, assistant planning director of the East Central Wisconsin Criminal Justice Planning Council, and Peter Dwyer, supervisor of juvenile court services in the La Crosse County Department of Social Services, said children accused of delinquency should be temporarily relocated in such centers rather than confined to county jails.

Rucker said most existing facilities were inadequate for youngsters awaiting permanent placement after being found delinquent, neglected or needy after court adjudication.

He said $204,500 was allocated for shelter care centers this year by the Wisconsin Council on Criminal Justice, and additional funds would be sought for such projects in 1975 from the U.S. Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA).

Dwyer said La Crosse County operates a Group Home and Receiving Home in residential areas where boys and girls live temporarily under the care of college educated foster parents. He said they cost about $28,000 each a year to operate, and were funded by the LEAA and the county.

2 Marion girls hurt in accident

CLINTONVILLE — Dawn Much, 16, and Barbara Wetzel, 15, both of Marion, are confined to Clintonville Community Hospital with head lacerations received in a one-car accident at 11 p.m. Friday on Buckbee Road, about four miles northwest of here.

They were passengers in a car driven by James L. Sasse, 17, 96 Pearl St., Clintonville.

According to the Waupaca County Traffic Patrol, Sasse was traveling west on Buckbee Road, and in rounding a curve, his car slid sideways into a bridge. The right side of the 1964 model, two-door car was extensively damaged.

High speed chase ends in arrest

OSHKOSH — A 39-year-old Antigo man was captured at gunpoint early this morning after, police charge, he led Winnebago County sheriff's officers and Neenah police on a high-speed chase that began in the Town of Oshkosh, where the man was suspected of committing a strong-arm robbery, and ended 12 minutes later on a Neenah street corner.

Arrested at Lorraine Street and Winnebago Avenue after his car was fired upon by Neenah police and rammed by a deputy's squad car was Russell Merrill, who was taken to the Winnebago County jail.

The charges against Merrill are expected to include strong-arm robbery and eluding police.

Deputies said five cars from the sheriff's department and between five and seven Neenah police cars were involved in the chase, which began at 3:03 a.m. and ended at 3:15 a.m. after reaching speeds in excess of 105 miles per hour.

According to reports, sheriff's deputy James Goggins was driving in the Town of Oshkosh area about 3 a.m. when he noticed two men standing at the intersection of County Trunks J and A. Goggins stopped to investigate and one of the men, who is from out of state and whose name has not been released, said the second man, Merrill, had just beaten him and robbed him of his wristwatch and $97.

Another deputy arrived after Goggins radioed for assistance and the officers attempted to arrest Merrill, who, they said, replied with a profane remark, pushed the officers aside, jumped into his car and began driving west on J.

The deputies gave chase and began radioing for further assistance. Merrill led his pursuers to State 45 and then north on U.S. 41 toward Neenah, where roadblocks, which Merrill either broke through or eluded, had been set up by police.

The chase continued into Neenah on Harrison Street, where Merrill turned left on Hunt Street, across Cecil Street and then to Cleveland and Zemlock streets.

He then crossed Winnebago Avenue to Irene Street, where he turned onto Lorraine Street back to Winnebago Avenue. By that time, a Neenah officer had fired three shots, all of which entered the left front fender of Merrill's 1964 car.

On Winnebago Avenue, Merrill began to swerve left in front of a squad car driven by sheriff's deputy Brian Bartelt. Bartelt rammed his squad car into Merrill's vehicle, bringing it to a stop at the corner of Lorraine Avenue.

Officers surrounded his car with drawn guns and ordered him to crawl out of the vehicle on his stomach. He was taken to the Neenah Police Department jail, where he was searched, and then transported to the county jail here.

Deputies said a warrant had been issued for Merrill in Antigo, where he was wanted in connection with an incident in which a woman had been beaten with a tire iron.

It is not known if the man Merrill is accused of robbing will press charges, deputies said.

Sheriff. . .

provide the sheriff with adequate manpower, traffic officers are routinely deputized and authorized to perform all the regular duties of police officers.

"Traffic officers are responsible to the captain of traffic, who is responsible to the law enforcement committee of the county board. These five men are appointed by the elected supervisors," Frazier said.

"Traffic officers are responsible to the sheriff, who is elected by the people and responsible to them, only when they are engaged in nontraffic police duties as deputies," he continued. "The sheriff, as a result, is placed in the awkward position of needing to rely upon officers over whom he has no real authority."

In Waupaca County this year, 3 per cent of the county's $6 million budget is spent on law enforcement, and the cost to the taxpayers is 75 cents per $1,000.

The sheriff's department has an operating budget of $173,206, with $79,858 of it for salaries for four police officers, four jailers, a janitor and 1 1/2 clerks. The traffic department has an operating budget of $102,592, which includes $70,679 for salaries for eight men.

"I strongly disapprove of the fact that rural people in this county have one law enforcement officer for every 5,000 people," Frazier said. "I was told that if I didn't like the situation as it is, not to run. I do not like what I see, so I am not running."

"This has been discussed many times with county officials and individual supervisors," Frazier said. "I was told that if I didn't like the situation as it is, not to run. I do not like what I see, so I am not running."

"I have 5 1/2 months left of my term, and I will serve the public to the best of my ability through the last day. Depend upon it."

Apartment plan to be considered

KIMBERLY — The Riverdale Corp., combined Locks, has been asked by the planning commission to submit detailed construction plans for several apartment houses by July 24 when that board would consider their desirability.

If the proposals are favorable, the commission will schedule a public hearing before recommendations are made to the village board.

Representatives of the firm said six apartment houses would be constructed south of Fourth Street between Joseph and Wilbur streets and would contain a total of 42 apartments. The ranch-type units would contain one- and two-bedroom efficiency apartments. The design would blend with the neighborhood and follow the planned unit development procedure set up in the village zoning ordinance, according to the firm.

No cost estimate has been placed on the proposed units. The land on which the buildings would be located is zoned industrial which prohibits residential building. Therefore, rezoning would be necessary before authorization for the apartment houses could be received.

Several planning commissioners indicated at last week's meeting that area residents would favor residential rather than industrial development.

Improvements providing more highway safety

MADISON — Highway Safety improvements, in which spot locations along the roadway are upgraded through signing improvements and minor construction, have been providing more safety for increasing numbers of vehicles, the state Division of Highways has announced.

A before-and-after analysis of 128 highway safety improvements completed in 1970 shows an average increase of 25 per cent in traffic volumes and an 11 per cent reduction in the traffic accident rate.

The accident study for each project included a two-year "before" and a two-year "after" accident listing by type and severity of accidents.

The 128 projects represented 12 improvement types and seven miscellaneous projects.

Accident rate of reductions for each type of improvement were: Bridge improvements, reconstruction, 50 per cent; new or improved guardrails, 50 per cent; interchange construction, 26 per cent; changed geometrics of intersections or interchanges, 17 per cent; elimination of lip curb, 50 per cent; remodeled traffic signals, 33 per cent; widen or resurface with realignment, 20 per cent.

Types of improvements where accident rates increased were: Installation of flashers, 50 per cent; installation of railroad signals, 8 per cent; installation of traffic signals, 23 per cent; widen or resurface without realignment, 7 per cent.

Dinner for Lorge

Republican candidates for statewide office on the November ballot pose with State Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, during a fund-raising dinner for Lorge Monday night in Appleton. Lorge is running for attorney gen-

Lorge criticizes Lucey administration

State Sen. Gerald Lorge, Bear Creek, Monday charged Gov. Patrick J. Lucey with centralizing state government in Madison, and with using his veto power to "clearly reverse and frustrate legislative policies."

Lorge, the Republican candidate for attorney general, said Lucey has misused his line veto power on a number of occasions "to thwart, to alter and even to reverse the intent of the people's elected representatives and senators in the legislation they pass."

He also criticized the U.S. Congress for stalling its investigation of Watergate until the November elections for political reasons.

Lorge spoke in Appleton at a fund-raising dinner held in his honor. The dinner was attended by local Republican officials, Republican state senators and representatives and the Republican candidate for governor, William Dyke.

Lorge accused Lucey of being responsible for making Wisconsin's taxes the highest of any state in the nation, for promoting legislation which, he said, provided for a complete takeover of mental health and welfare services by the state, and for attempting to close down some prisons and set up unsupervised alternatives.

He also criticized Lucey's backing of certain unspecified bills relating to crime.

"If we (the legislature) had passed all the bills the administration asked for, we would have had a decrease of crime because many crimes would have been legalized," he said.

Lorge said Lucey misused his veto power to:

— Remove county authority over snowmobile trails, thus giving that control to the DNR.

— Prevent formation of an independent state agency to deal with problems of the elderly.

— Kill, with a partial veto, a state trunk highway improvements project.

— Reverse policy on university user fees to be assessed "only on hard-pressed students, rather than faculty, administrators and private individuals who would use university facilities—

— Weaken legislative controls over administrative rules."

He told the audience that the U.S. Congress had a "preoccupation with Watergate and corruption in government."

He later said possible government crimes should be investigated, but that Congress was spending too much time on Watergate while not concerning itself enough with other issues, particularly inflation.

"They are dragging this thing out to the November elections for political reasons," he said. "They should conclude it—cut the politics, get to the meat of it and bring it to an end."

Dyke spoke briefly, praising Lorge's record, and encouraging those attending to actively back the Republican party, which, he said, is in a "time of difficulty."

"It's easy to say, 'What's the use?' There are some. A lot of people have already said it, even Republicans, who would just as soon take a walk. We have way too much to lose," Dyke said.

Total legal fees in airline case on hyphen amount to over $8,000

The total legal fees charged by a Washington law firm to fight North Central Airlines' appeals of an ordered separation of the Appleton and Oshkosh air markets in 1972 were $8,304.39, Karl Baldwin, president of Air Wisconsin, Inc., has revealed.

Under an arrangement, the City of Appleton, the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce and Outagamie County had each contributed $1,000, and Air Wisconsin and Mid-State Air Commuter, of Wisconsin Rapids-Marshfield, each had contributed $2,000.

But Baldwin said the $7,000 contributions fell short, and he is asking each contributor to increase its share. All have agreed to except the city, which won't make a decision until the matter is considered by the City Council finance committee next month.

The law firm, Seamon, Wasko & Straus, is seeking its final payment, $1,711.43 for June, plus $523.39 in back payments, for a total of $2,234.

Baldwin said he had about $900 left from the contribution fund. The firm provided services, including preparing and participating in oral argument, advice and consultation, and conferences with North Central attorneys and the office of general counsel of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The air market separation legal battle started in August, 1972, when Appleton, Outagamie County, the chamber and Air Wisconsin appeared before a CAB administrative law judge to request that North Central no longer be officially recognized as serving Appleton area since the Appleton area had Air Wisconsin.

Representatives of Sheboygan joined in the lawsuit seeking separation from the Manitowoc-Sheboygan designation and Wisconsin Rapids and Marshfield from the Central Wisconsin designation, all being served officially by North Central.

North Central, Oshkosh, Winnebago County and others where the airports were located fought the change.

North Central and its supporters lost at the initial hearing, the appeal to CAB and the appeal to the District of Columbia Appeals Court. The airline recently said it wouldn't appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Police & fire beat

Dagmar A. Holy, 51, 812 S. Matthias St., was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital after she sustained head injuries in a two-car accident at Jefferson and McKinley streets about 4:40 p.m. Monday.

Police said she was driving east on McKinley while the second car, driven by Scott A. Swamer, 26, 2534 Southwood Drive, failed to yield from the south-bound lane of Jefferson.

A $120 steel siding cutter was reported missing after a weekend break-in at Romanesco Roofing & Siding, 1500 N. Owaissa St.

An inventory was to be conducted to determine losses from a break-in between July 1 and 15 at a warehouse leased by Kimberly-Clark Corp. at 500 E. Winnebago St.

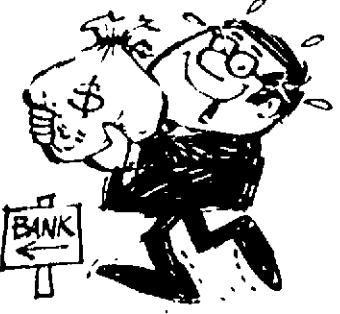

Police said entry was gained by breaking windows with a rock. Two fire extinguishers were emptied and left outside the building.

Four fishing rods and reels valued together at between $75 and $80 were reported stolen from a shed next to the Henry Mauritz residence, 1817 N. Charlotte St., apparently late last Thursday.

Marie K. Hammer, Shawano, told Appleton police she lost her purse at the H.C. Prange downtown store Monday afternoon. She said the purse contained cash and travelers' checks valued together at $207.

The problems of passengers and cargo ending up in Oshkosh, when they were expecting to end up in Appleton, was a major argument against the joint, or hyphenated, designation, which was effected before Air Wisconsin existed.

Vote slated on budget at Little Chute

LITTLE CHUTE — Voters at the annual school district meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at the high school will be asked to vote on a $1,600,768 budget for 1974-75, up $415,840 from last year's figure.

A budget hearing at 7 p.m. will review the proposal prior to its consideration for final approval at the meeting, where all qualified electors of the district are eligible to vote.

The proposed budget calls for a levy of $19.61 per $1,000 assessed valuation compared to a $16.13 rate last year. The amount to be raised by local taxes will increase from $441,028 to $549,553 in the proposed budget.

Areas where major increases in expenditures are noted include instructional supplies, which jumps from $28,952 to $121,628; contracted services, up from $14,870 to $27,420; transportation, up from $13,650 to $24,900; fixed charges, up from $119,685 to $183,885 and capital outlays, which, increased from $56,000 to $100,041.

School Supt. Mark Stone said much of the increase is due to recent state legislation concerning education for children with special learning difficulties. This law necessitated the addition of several new teachers and expanded contract services for a psychologist, special education supervisor and added speech therapy services.

Of the large increase in capital outlays, $60,000 alone is earmarked for added industrial arts equipment to meet the needs of an expanded program and another $15,000 is needed for improved science classes and a distributive education program.

The almost $100,000 increase in instructional supplies represents large expenditures for library books and visual aid equipment at the middle school. These are items which were not purchased last year because the future of the middle school was still uncertain and negotiations were under way to purchase it from St. John parish. It formerly was St. John High School and library materials and other items were not suitable for middle school purposes.

Development of an instructional material center at both the high school and middle school also accounts for much of the supply costs increase, noted Stone.

Other expenses in the budget show administration up from $37,775 to $43,775; instruction salaries up from $620,646 to $791,850, which includes 15 additional teachers; operation up from $93,300 to $102,000; maintenance up from $47,750 to $57,000, of which $10,000 is for a new elementary school roof. Food service stayed the same at $6,000. Student body activities remain at $13,500.

Other expenses in the proposed budget show debt service up to $114,553 from $92,800; material for resale, up from $5,000 to $8,000, and federal programs up from $1,716.

Receipts other than tax levy in the proposed budget show mobile home park fees constant at $3,500, general state aids of $965,443, compared to $656,765; other state aids such as handicapped, special education, transportation, library and similar areas up from $27,700 to $42,500. Other local receipts, such as food services, athletics, textbook rentals, materials for resale, interest refunds and others, were up from $26,300 to $34,100. Federal aids were up from $8,431 to $13,216.

'Fear' of autos after accident gets woman $12,500 settlement

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Joyce Krogman, a Madison woman who testified that an automobile accident last year gave her a fear of cars, was awarded $12,500 Tuesday in Circuit Court.

Dr. George Calden, a clinical psychologist, described Mrs. Krogman's fear as a phobia.

Mrs. Krogman's attorney, Jack McManus, said she becomes nervous and upset whenever she gets into an automobile.
